Individual studies, projects show we are

Thoughts of books mix with early morning day-dreaming.

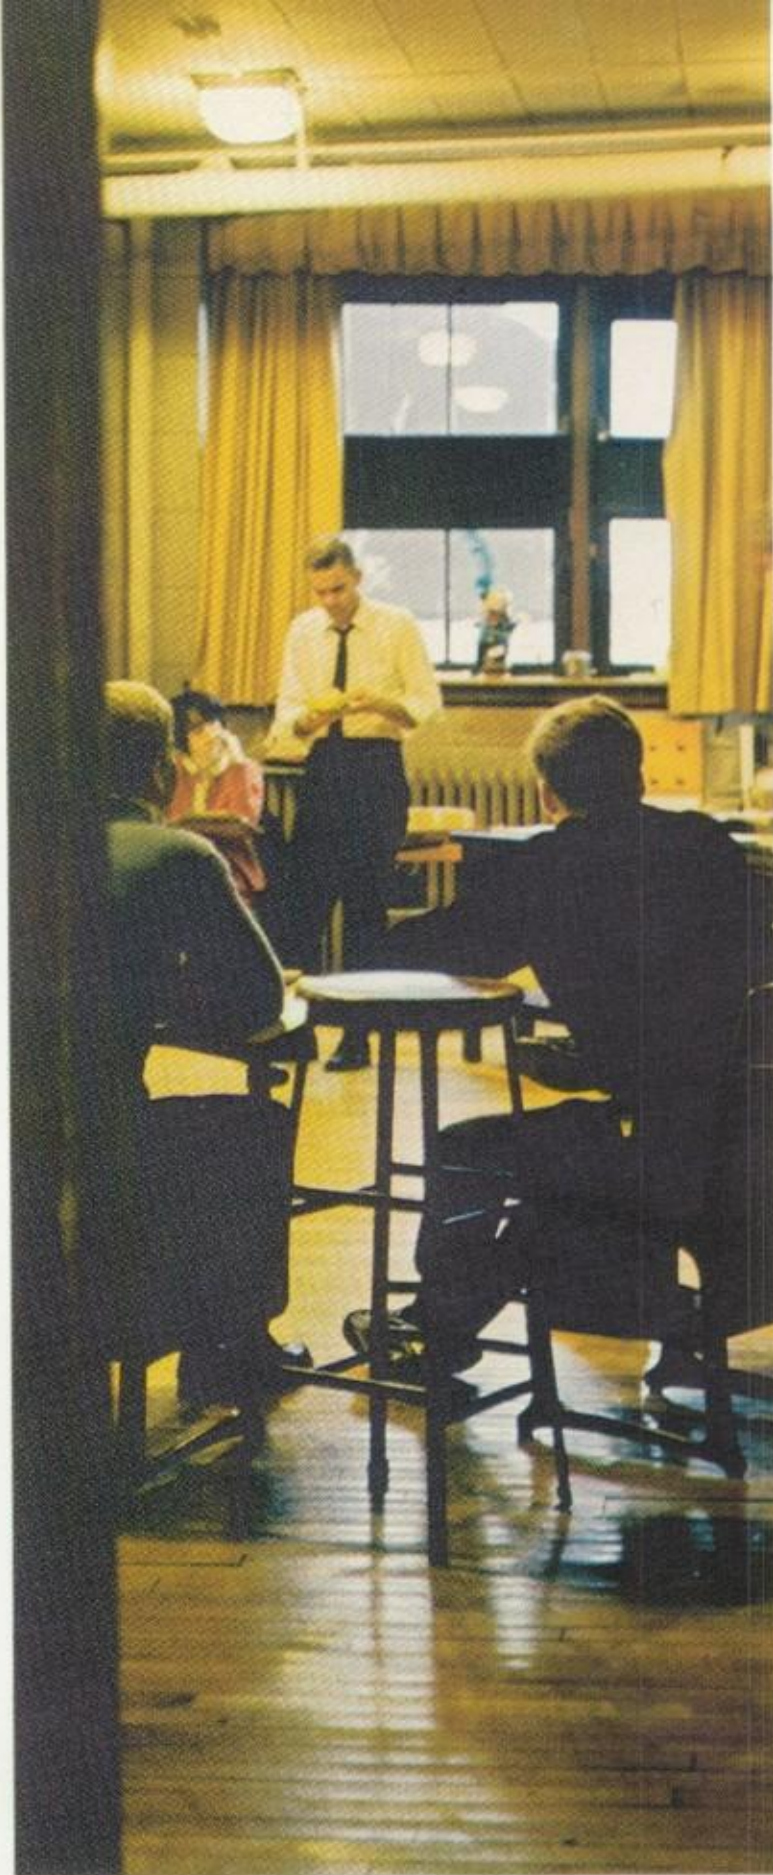

Careful attention to instruction is important, whether it be in the classroom, in club activities, or during half-time briefing sessions.

not always part of a group

When the students return to LT from the relaxed world of summer vacation, they must adapt to the whirlwind of activities in which they find themselves. Each day they shift their attention to meet the varying demands of four or five subjects, not to mention their extra-curricular pastimes.

They must be able to concentrate wholly on whatever they are doing, be it a research paper or a blocking assignment.

Intensity of thought and effort indicate the search for understanding.

An over-abundance of energy is quickly dissipated in an active display of school spirit. The sharing of fears and excitement binds observers and team-mates together. Lively cheers and a genuine enthusiasm lend support to eager-to-please school athletes and give the audience a feeling of involvement and participation in the action.

Placard in hand, Noil prepares to charge up LT school spirit at a home football game.

Splitting paper, flashing color, excited cheering proclaim pride in the school's athletes.

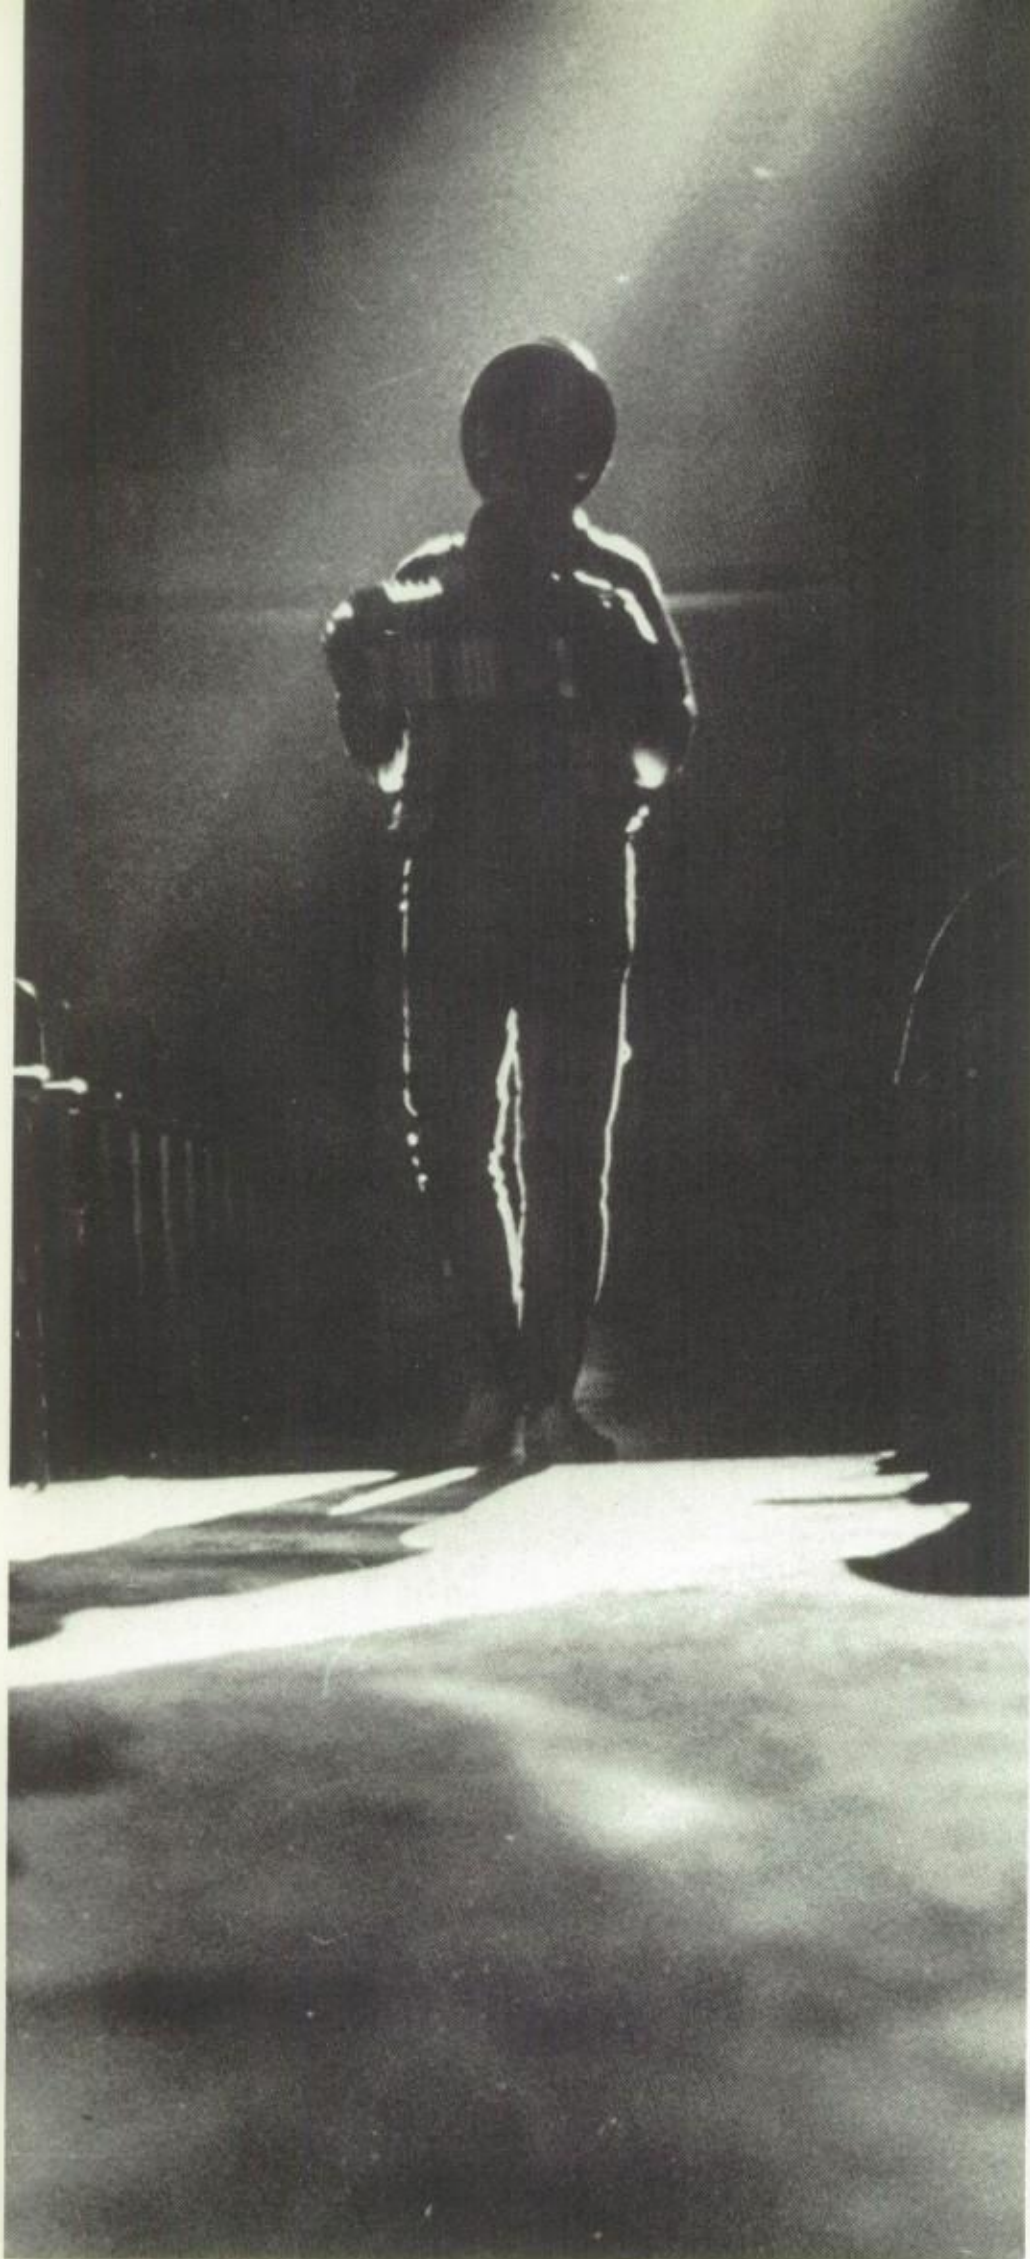

Amid a flurry of rustling pom-pons and floating streamers, LT'ers shout out the words to a familiar cheer.

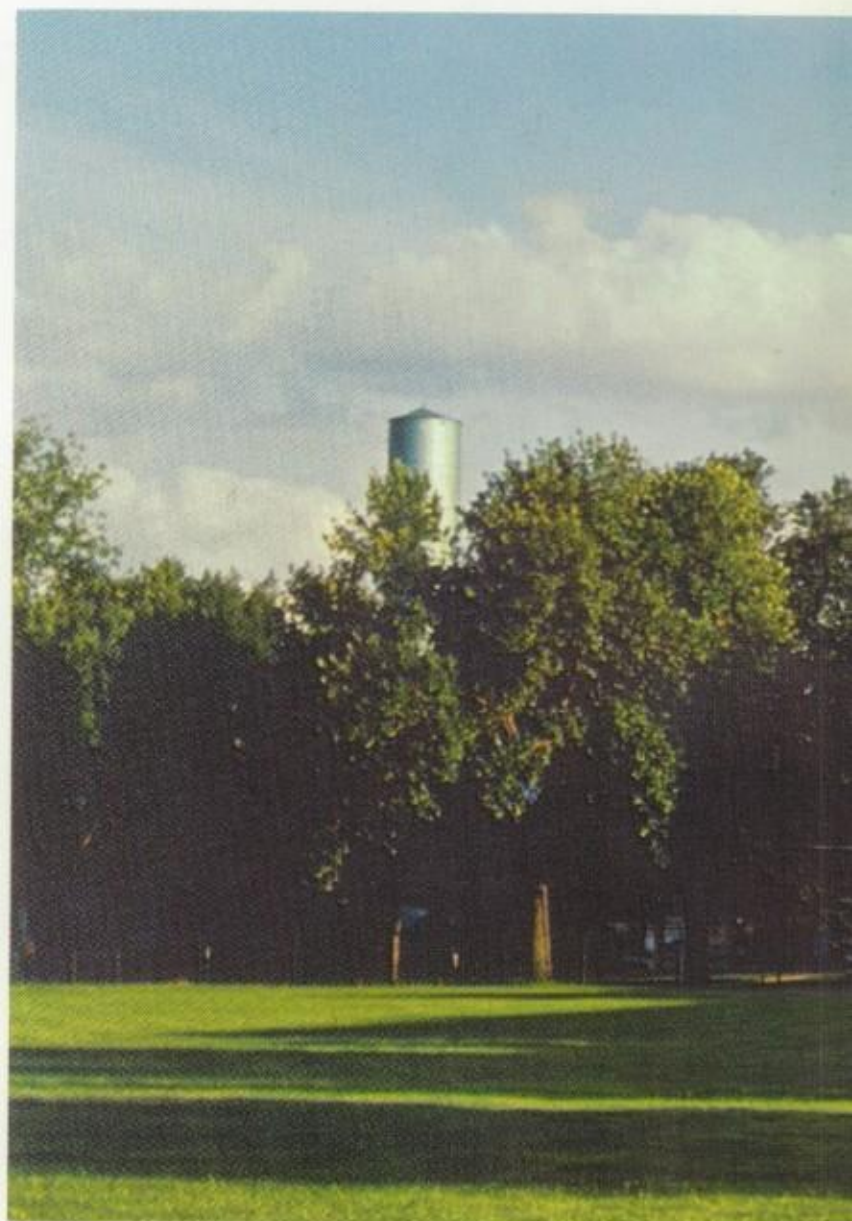

The bells of sunlit tubas capture the image of excitement at the Homecoming game.

The magic of a play fuses reality with the imagination of the audience.

Our participation makes us integral parts of the world we call LT.

The completion of a well-executed float requires the concerted effort of many hands.

Striving to excel, straining hands reflect the effort given to all endeavors.

Changing seasons affect

The first snowfall traces a new white landscape around North Campus, unmarred by early-morning arrivals.

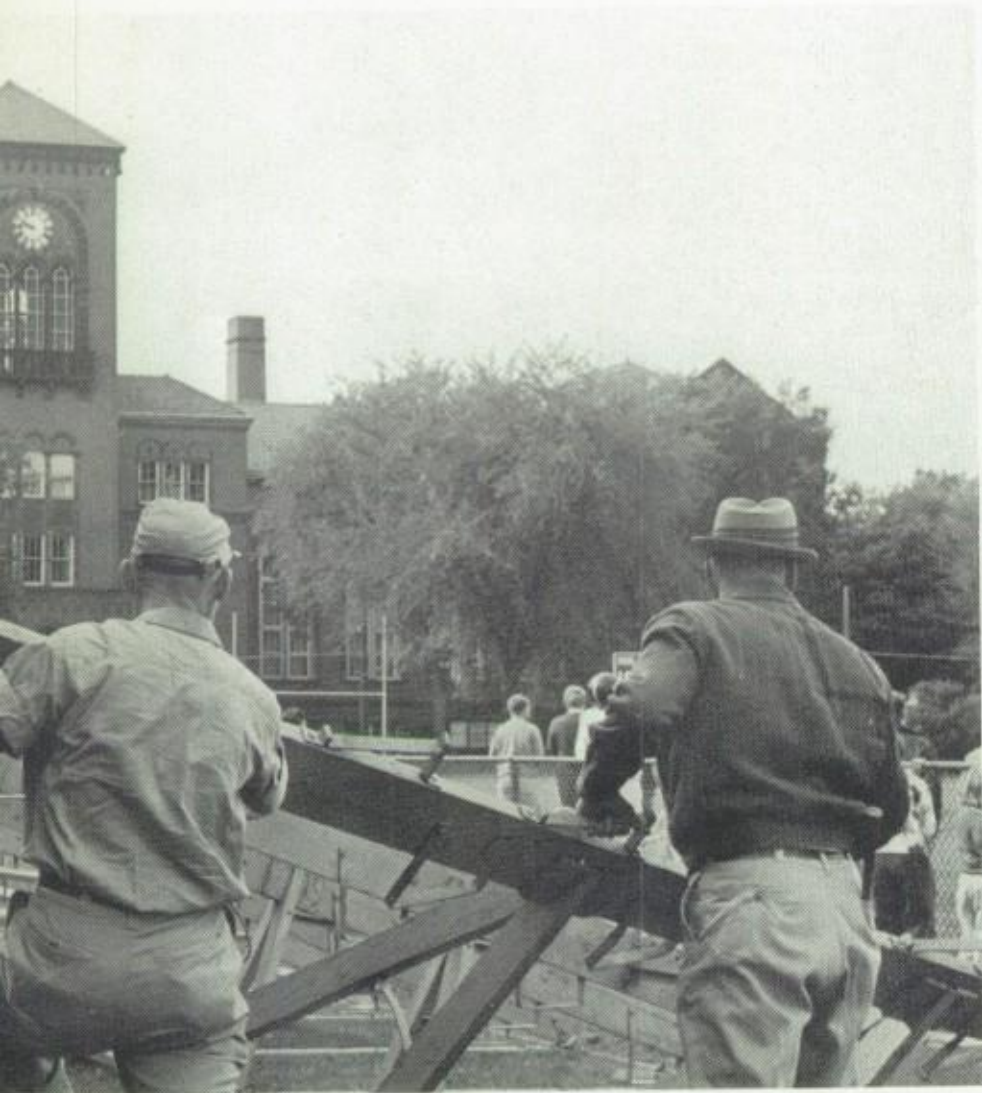

Rising bleachers match rising hopes for a successful football season.

A new season and a new North Campus class usher in another academic year.

our moods, our thoughts, our activities, our lives

Streets became sidewalks for the duration of the "Big Snow."

Looking up for greater things to come, Noil represents all of the spirit of LT.

Marking our progress through the year, seasons mirror our moods. Weather is a prominent force in our lives, since we often pattern ourselves after its whims. In the calendar of seasons, we are reminded that lives change. Because of the constant movement of nature, we are able to discover a necessary stability in the seasons.

We are drawn together in the total community of the school, but our individuality cannot be hidden. In service organization, dramatics, music, athletics, art, journalism, speech, and a variety of other interests we display our distinctive personalities. In each outlet we grow and leave LT as unique characters.

After the exhilarating effect of the contest has worn off, only stiff muscles and pride in the effort remain.

Pancake and grease paint create a new identity in a few brief moments.

Through service we find fulfillment.

The release from school, delayed by an extra-curricular activity, provides a first brief moment for thoughts of the day's occurrences.

ACTIVITIES

The common denominator of mutual interests unites individuals who comprise an organization. Members find enjoyment through meetings or projects, and this enjoyment becomes the first criterion of any activity's success. Yet there is a more profound aspect, often overlooked in the immediacy of enthusiasm. Sharing through their ideas and shaping our own, we find in our activities a range of experience unattainable alone. Through responsibility we grow as a part of a group, recognizing within the group the diversity of others' interests. In later years we will perhaps perceive that with the satisfaction which came of the enjoyment, effort, and companionship gained from our activities we also discovered a bit of maturity.

Committees, School Spirit Week aim to increase

In keeping with its position as one of the strongest organizations at LT, the Student Council undertook such diverse activities as dances, elections, and Homecoming '66, "The Greatest Stories Ever Told." Led by president Bill McConnell, Council staged School Spirit Week in November to honor clubs, newly-elected representatives, athletes, and foreign students. The Christmas dance, held at Melody Mill, highlighted the winter festivities. As a different expression of Christmas spirit, the Council sponsored the sending of Christmas cards to LT alumni stationed in Vietnam. The AFS drive and the well-attended sock hop provided money for future foreign students and also increased interest in the AFS program. A committee was selected to investigate the possibility of staggered elections which would enable defeated Student Council officer candidates to run for delegate positions. Working closely with the Representative Assembly and with the faculty, Student Council increased student interest and participation in the government and activities of LT.

A question raised during a Student Council meeting creates a moment of reflection as minds search for an effective solution.

Emphasizing close relations between communications groups and Student Council, Representative Assembly met throughout the year to discuss students' problems. Reporting class reactions to Student Council business, representatives were called upon on several occasions to lead discussions of such topics as Homecoming and current social problems. One important matter they presented to the student dealt with an amendment to the constitution proposing that elections for freshman representatives to Student Council be held earlier in the year. As its last major act this year, the Assembly approved Student Council's gift to the school.

Organized to include all LT girls, Girls' Club's many functions make it one of the busiest clubs. A council composed of girls elected from each communications group kept all members informed about such projects as the sponsorship of the club's foster child and the March of Dimes and Care drives. The dating panel, the King of Hearts Dance, and the Big 'n' Little Sister program promoted school-wide interest in girl's club activities. Under the direction of North Campus president Katie Chambers, South Campus chairman Holly Dickinson, and several sponsors at both campuses, the club worked hard to be of service to both the school and the community.

Dance, directory highlight Boys' Club calendar;

Boys' Club stressed service to the school and the community through its various projects. Among fall activities was the publication of the student directory, a traditional event given a modern twist this year, in that information was compiled by the school's data processing equipment. Club president Phil Morse and sponsors Mr. Gianuzzi and Mr. Neuneker planned the Boys' Club dance, "Queen of Spades," in mid-March. Part of the profit was for joint support — with Girls' Club — of a Peruvian girl. The club concluded the year's activities by presenting the school a JC scholarship to an LT boy.

Senior Tom Hutchinson finds that membership in Lettermen's Club also entails needed, if less than glamorous, duties.

Lettermen's Club enables LT athletes to supplement their athletic abilities with such service acts as ushering at home basketball games and wrestling meets and escorting the Homecoming queen and her court at the Pep Assembly. Members not directly in athletic events were asked to form a special cheering section in the bleachers to increase school spirit.

This year, for the first time, the club, with the help of sponsor, Mr. Wilsey, planned the Kick-Off dance, "Harvest Moon," which had previously been under Student Council's supervision. President Tom Hutchinson and the other officers used the profit from the dance to pay for a May banquet for all members in good standing. The varied activities and services undertaken by the club illustrate our athletes' willingness to serve LT beyond their participation on the playing field.

Even photographers have to type if the Lion is to meet its deadlines.

Serving as president of the Illinois State High School Press Association, members of the Lion staff resumed their official duties in September by attending and helping to organize the association's state convention at Champaign. Over fifty upperclassmen, under the direction of twenty-two senior editors, attempted to assemble stories which had the widest range of reader appeal. Aiding the editors at South Campus, were more than seventy-five underclass staff members, who often helped out at North after school. Upperclass staffers and editors, enrolled in Journalism II or English IIIJ classes spent about twenty-five hours a week working on the Lion. Layout modernization and more extensive use of color, an effect which appeared four times during the year, marked a new look for the publication. In an unprecedented compliment to the Lion, the Scholastic Roto bought 1500 copies of the LT publication for distribution to businesses as an excellent example of a secondary school newspaper.

Art and copy staffers Sandy Smith and Mary Usas work closely together to integrate the many tasks of producing a unified yearbook.

Tucked away in one of the more inaccessible regions of the third floor lies what is referred to as, among other things, the Tab office. It is here that each year the Tabulae staff manages somehow to produce LT's yearbook. Armed with determination and experience, and filled with ideas for improvements and innovations gained at the ISHPA and NSPA conventions, the staff set out early to begin the complex series of tasks which must be co-ordinated to produce the yearbook.

Staffers and editors, under the direction of Mr. Bull, designed layouts, cropped photos, and wrote copy as deadline followed deadline from September to May. Relief from these nearly incessant duties came in the form of a candlelight Christmas dinner and the parties held for editors' birthdays, complete with paper hats, noisemakers, cake, and games. The end of the year brought the selection of the 1968 Tabulae staff and memories of a year of madness, hard work, frustration, and accomplishment.

Quill and Scroll, a national honor society for high school journalists, has for many years been welcoming to its ranks those members of high school publications whose services and quality of work have characterized them as outstanding journalists. Since all members devote most of their time to working on their own publications, Quill and Scroll has no regular meetings other than the spring initiation. Following this candlelit ceremony, each newly-honored member was asked to sign the membership scroll of the organization, whereupon he received his official pin. This traditional ceremony was a long-anticipated event capping a year of many hours and deadlines for LT's Tab and Lion.

show journalistic

Designed to incorporate all types of creativity, Pen 'n' Inklings is compiled and published by staffs at both campuses. First meetings were held early to determine possible changes in format, to set up workable standards for judging entries, and to begin the task of reading student work. To make processing more efficient, contributors were asked to type pieces in correct manuscript form. After readers had graded a piece, the editorial staff decided its fate. Finally South Campus sponsor Miss Vish together with editor Margaret Bicek, made decisions on underclass prose and poetry, while sponsors Miss Allen and Miss Jordan and editor-in-chief Harlan White made the irreversible decisions at North. The art department culled art and photography for the anthology at the request of editors and sponsors. Near the close of the year, the magazine came out in time to be discussed by English classes at both campuses.

appearance of big-name combos, local groups

This year, the Corral increased its schedule of events in order to attract more upperclassmen. President Scott Bradley and the rest of the Corral board brought in two well-known Chicago area combos, "The Cryin' Shames" and "The Buckinghams" as well as many talented local groups to entertain. Though admission was charged to see both these outside groups, the Corral was more than filled to capacity. Hundreds of members helped construct the Homecoming float, "Grapes of Wrath", which finished second in the unlimited division of the competition. One night each month, the youth center featured a "Big Night" in which all members could participate; these included a slave auction, a beauty contest, and the Winter Carnival.

Sponsors Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Kraus guided the board in financial matters, such as planning repairs plus the budget. The center's main source of income was the Corral Show, a large musical written and produced by LT students. The show, held in May this year, ended an activity-filled year.

Due to the efforts of Latin II Club members, Latin is not a dead but a lively language. Members participated in skits and word derivation games to increase understanding of the language as well as to discover the adaptability of Latin to puzzles. Club president Bev Lutz and sponsor Mr. Hammerlund co-ordinated the efforts of the entertainment, decorations, and refreshment committee to make certain that upcoming events ran smoothly. Students also presented skits and played Latin games during one early spring meeting. Even later in the year, Latin I students were permitted to attend a meeting to familiarize them with the activities held by sophomore Latin students. Finally, Latin II students, wearing ancient Roman garb, utilized their knowledge of Roman customs to create an authentic atmosphere for the last club festivity, the banquet.

Dreams of world conquest grow in the mind of Latin II Club's Super Caesar.

Latin II Clubs meet, dine, think Roman

Romans Laurie Refieuna, Mari Przewoznik, and Jim Daly discover the meaning of Saturnalia in a Christmas skit presented at Cicero-Vergil Club.

The Cicero-Vergil Club, sponsored by Miss Wilson and headed by pro-consul Jeff Ellis, enjoyed a year filled with new memberships and varied activities. Linking ancient history with modern festivities, the club's Homecoming float portrayed a Trojan horse pulled by slaves wearing burlap togas. At Christmas time, the Saturnalia, a Roman festival, was celebrated with skits and games. During a lull in LT as well as Roman holidays, lectures and slides of modern Italy and ancient ruins were presented in an effort to deepen members' understanding of the influence of ancient Rome's culture. In the spring, the club stages a Roman banquet, featuring authentic dishes, gladiatorial combat, and other entertainment, for the enjoyment of the dinner guests. The entertainment consisted of music by members of LT's orchestra. As the end of the year approached, the annual picnic provided a friendly climax to an educational and enjoyable year.

Promoting familiarity with Spanish culture and fluency in the Spanish language was the goal of LT's Spanish clubs. Guiding Los Castellanos at South Campus were sponsor Mrs. Matousek and president Bob Byington, who organized and presided over the monthly meetings. Traditional Spanish Christmas festivities, Spanish and Mexican magazines, and films and slides of South America gave members increased knowledge and understanding of the customs of foreign lands.

Under the supervision of the North Campus Spanish teachers, president Bob Emery and his executive board led El Circulo Espanol in a full round of activities. Spanish-style Christmas celebrated and observance of such Mexican holidays as Columbus Day and Pan-American Day gave insight into colorful traditions. Topping off the club's activity was a chili supper at a Spanish restaurant, where members absorbed the distinctive flavor of the Spanish-speaking world.

Christmas party, field trips, speakers enrich

One of LT's largest organizations, German Club is also one of the most active. Representatives from each German class attended board meetings to plan the club's varied activities and to organize its well-attended general meetings. A showing of slides brought different aspects of German life to members at the initial meeting, while the Christmas party, featuring games and skits, provided entertainment and the opportunity to test members' linguistic skill. In the spring, the traditional outing to a downtown German restaurant was led by North Campus sponsor Miss Rathert and Mr. Hoch from South Campus and gave members an opportunity to sample such German favorites as beef Roulade, Sauerbraten, and Wiener Schnitzel. A German movie brought members into contact with German as it is actually spoken, to the dismay of those who could not keep up with its fast-paced dialogue. Concluding the year, the Club Carnival booth made an enjoyable final project and a successful climax to a busy year.

Discussing the perpetual problem of what to stuff in stockings and lay beneath the tree, Santa's German Club elves chuckle at their own amusing suggestions.

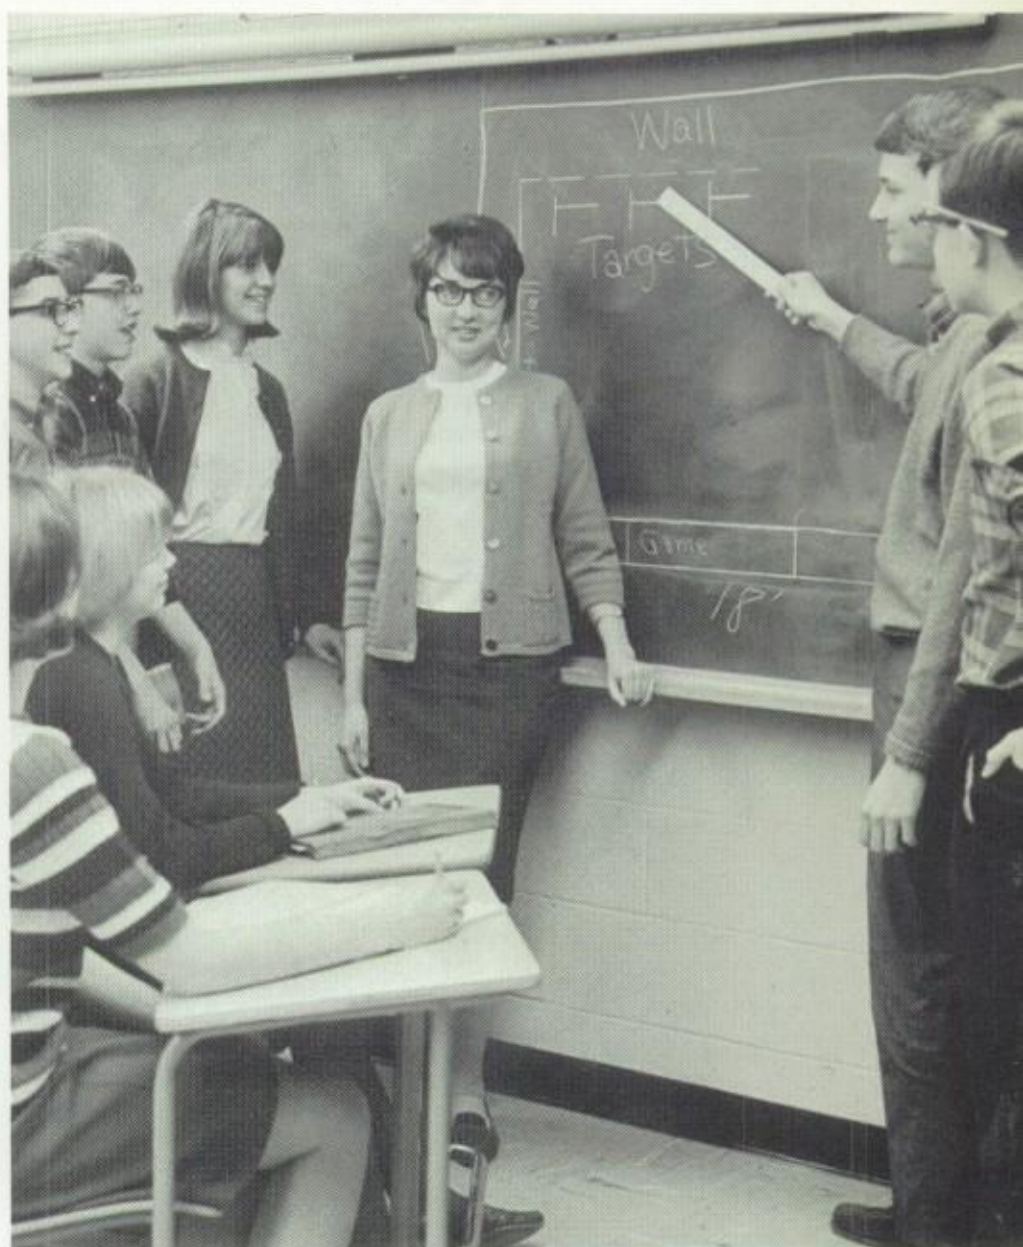

Anticipation of the evening outing looms on German Club members' minds as they plan financial details of a German dinner and movie.

accent fun through guest speakers, field trips

Humor adds interest in learning a language, realizes Jayne Aube as she posts a French cartoon on the class bulletin board.

Parties and outings to French films and plays gave a lift to both North and South Campus French Clubs. Beginning the year, sponsors Miss Hart and Mrs. Martin sponsored a party for freshman members which featured a satirical skit on French political history. In late fall, underclass members heard singer Charles Aznavour perform in Chicago. Meanwhile, sponsor Miss Ford invited North Campus members who had traveled abroad to show slides of France at their meetings. At the Christmas parties, members sang familiar carols in French. A visit from a French foreign student, a booth at the Club Carnival, and a French Banquet climaxed the year.

Russian Club, LT's only language club open to all students, scheduled a full calendar of events for its members. Many of the club's activities, planned by sponsor Mr. Petronaitis and president Don Wilson, were designed to emphasize an inter-school exchange of ideas. Fall events include an October mixer hosted by LT students plus an LT-Hinsdale sponsored presentation of a Russian movie. In April a guest speaker made members aware of Russian life's cultural aspects. The annual May club banquet featured a talk by several persons who had recently traveled in Russia. A Lane Tech sponsored inter-school Russian clubs' picnic held in the spring, ended the club's year.

Long hours, at home and in school, combined with general co-operation and enthusiastic spirit to provide Theater Board with a highly successful year. Committees, composed of board members, devoting their time to costuming, make-up, props, publicity, tickets, and ushers, consolidated their efforts to produce LT's 1966-67 play bill. Presentations of Rhinoceros, Hamlet, and Rainmaker benefited from the organization of board members, under the guidance of Miss Mellen. An innovation in the fields of ticket sales provided differentiation between adult and student tickets. In addition to helping on the major school plays, Theater Board lent its assistance to the South Campus production of The Lark and to the choir musical, Carnival, ending a worthwhile year in supplying LT with an excellent program in the theater arts.

Speakers verbalize in state-wide meets, sharpen

Under Mr. Albright's direction, South Campus Drama Club members consider interpretation of play dialogue.

One of three honorary societies extant at LT, the National Thespian Society entered its fourth active year. Members were chosen by the society on the basis of points awarded for participation in theater activities. Development of acting and dramatic talent were not the only criteria; skill in publicity, set design, costuming, and make-up also earned points in recognition of all-around ability in theater crafts. The initiation dinners gave the year a formal note, and the spring drama assembly served as a showcase for members' talents.

Many South Campus students interested in drama joined the populous Drama Club this year. Not everyone found opportunity to act, but members practiced such arts as theater make-up, costuming, and direction, giving all a chance to participate. In order to obtain professional quality in dramatic work, members attended a Chicago production. Under the direction of Mr. Albright, they produced a play, "The Ugly Duckling," for South Campus students. Martha Neitzel, club president, organized a picnic to mark the end of a year of hard work.

After placing a first in prose reading at the ISU tournament in fall, Speech contestants continued their success with a first place rating at the West Suburban Conference Tournament aimed at fostering an early interest in speech among local schools. LT's speech team, the largest in recent years, consisted of over twenty-five members entering competition on ten levels. Participation in the Homewood-Flossmoor Tournament, one of the largest in the state, enabled the team to take two firsts and a third at Wheaton Central. Speakers also competed at the Sectional Division Level of American Legion Oratory and the Voice of Democracy contest. At the District Meet, the team qualified with a first, second, and third and went to the sectionals, placing two fourths. Complying with the prerequisite of outstanding achievement at some legitimate three-round tournament, during the year, three members went to the Tournament of Champions at New Trier East. As their last official duty of the year, the speech participants presented a rhetorical assembly at the end of May.

Resolved: that LT's Debate teams shall continue

Confronted with the proposition Resolved: that the United States should limit its foreign aid program to non-military assistance, the LT Debate squad outlined cases and researched evidence under the direction of Miss Forner, sponsor. In addition to Saturday tournaments, members were kept busy with intrasquad debates and personal team research. One of the largest novice tournaments in the state, held at North Campus this year, not only gave freshmen an opportunity to debate but also gave sub-varsity and varsity debaters experience in scheduling, handling, and tabulating the results of an extensive operation. In the spring, the varsity division placed third at the state level. The year ended with a formal presentation of participation pins, the Sanquist Cup for distinguished achievement and a much-enjoyed banquet.

Debaters Ken Shepro and Norman LaForce get a few tips for preparation from their coach Miss Forner before the next debate.

to work hard, prepare for debates thoroughly

While its well-known guest speakers still attracted more attention than the other activities, the Forum this year also strove to increase the frequency and interest in club discussions. The scheduled activities began with a major organizational session in September under the leadership of sponsor Mr. Temple and president Bob Jensen. At that time members viewed the movie, "While Brave Men Die," and afterward made plans for Forum's Homecoming float. Throughout the year lectures by such personalities as Sen. Paul H. Douglas of Illinois and State Treasurer Adlai E. Stevenson III were well-attended by both students and faculty. A women's guild interested in furthering interest in current events and politics gave the Forum a $500 gift to help defray the organization's expenses.

In-depth examinations of current and controversial topics prod listeners to participation in Forum's open discussion.

Spirited competition and a chance to increase skill in the game of chess were offered by Chess Club this year. Under the guidance of Mr. Anderson, club president George Dizikes led bi-weekly meetings where new techniques and lines of play were developed and discussed. During the Friday afternoon sessions both inexperienced and veteran players were engaged in discussion and competition. For the first time, the club was able to schedule matches with clubs from other schools. The organization's Christmas party and Club Carnival booth rounded out this year's expanded list of activities.

LT music lovers had the opportunity to participate in the many activities sponsored by Mu Tau. In addition to frequent meetings at which ensembles and soloists performed, members devoted time to such activities as building a Homecoming float and managing a Club Carnival booth. They raised money serving refreshments at the Pops Concert and selling carnations on Valentine's Day. Revenue from these projects enable Mu Tau to contribute to the school music fund which will bring a college choir to LT next year. Members also extended their appreciation of music by attending the downtown musical production of Fiddler on the Roof and by ushering at West Suburban Symphony Orchestra concerts. North and South Campus presidents Gini Dittus and Pam Jaxon installed next year's officers at a potluck supper to mark the ending of a successful year.

by Mu Tau, Folk Music organizations

Guitarists, banjoists, folk singers, and other students interested in music joined in Folk Music Club to combine their enthusiasm with their talents. Led by Mrs. Fleischman and president Paul J. Sticha, members performed before the group and evaluated the work of others. Their parents were put to good use in performing for the residents of a LaGrange nursing home and in entertaining in a simulated coffee house for Club Carnival. The organization made it possible for non-members to participate in its activities by sponsoring a trip to Chicago to hear folk singers Simon and Garfunkel in concert and an inter-school hootenanny in which groups from visiting high schools performed. These activities sparked school-wide interest and encouraged talented students to perform in the folk music field while giving non-performers an increased appreciation of folk music.

Straining to capture an elusive tone, Paul J. Sticha and Bill Anderson fill the Folk Music Club meeting with the sound of "He Was My Brother."

Combined choirs harmonize in Christmas Festival,

A wide choice of choral activities is offered by LT's Choruses as an outlet for students interested in music. At the freshman level Freshman Girls' Glee Club and Freshman Boys' Chorus initiate members to public performance at an open house and tea. Sophomores are encouraged to try out for either Sophomore Mixed or Sophomore Girls' choruses, both of which entertain at open houses and at combined music programs. Upperclassmen compete for places in Concert Choir, Treble Choir, or Choir. All three groups sing at the Vespers Concert early in the Christmas season. Treble Choir performed at the junior open house, harmonized expertly under critical eyes during a teachers' workshop at the Chicago Circle Campus, and compete in the state music contest. Choir, utilizing fully its talented singers, faced a challenging schedule, which included the school's musical and an oratorio in the spring. Small choir, chosen from the large choir, sang at the Pops Concert and at a North Campus assembly. Culminating a year of intense effort, all choruses combined at the Spring Concert.

In a melodious volume of seasonal selections, the combined choruses and orchestra round out the Christmas concert.

Three bands blare out the spirit that is LT;

Three LT Bands, one at North Campus and two at South Campus, shared the responsibility of providing entertainment during half-times of football games. The South Campus bands also alternated performances at basketball contests. In addition to marching in the parade, the band collaborated with the orchestra members in building a prizewinning Homecoming float. A highpoint of the year came when the varsity band traveled to Evanston to take part in Northwestern University's Band Day. Under the direction of Mr. Hilgendorf and Mr. Barber, band members took part in the Fall Band Concert and the Spring Concert. Held in mid-March, the Spring Concert featured solo performances by members who had won awards in the state solo contest. LT made the strongest showing it has in recent years at the contest, ultimately finishing second. The long-awaited band picnic officially ended the band's year on a successful note.

Freshman band members hit the big time as they lead off the Homecoming parade.

Many months of preparation are reflected in the various concerts that Orchestra presents to LT students. Using after-school time to gain the benefit of practice earlier in the year, the orchestra presented it's annual Pops Concert, which consisted of relatively recent compositions in the fall. The changing seasons coincided with the changing presentations of the Christmas and Spring Concerts in which the orchestra, directed by Mr. Barber, went to state competition. The year did not consist entirely of musical events, however, as evidenced by the entrance of a float in the Homecoming parade and the end-of-the-year picnic.

Art-minded students

Artistically Rebellious Students sharpened creative abilities and powers of self-expression through frequent ARS meetings, in which ceramics, sculpture, and painting were explored. Demonstrations and a trip to the Bauhaus art exhibition at the Museum of Science and Industry highlighted club activities. The Art Fair, sponsored by advisor Mr. Young and president Debbie Taylor, culminated a year of artistic activity.

Photography as an artistic and scientific media was the theme emphasized by Camera Club this year. The club primarily involved members in such activities as monthly "shooting" sessions at South Campus, and bi-monthly instruction in basic darkroom techniques. Sponsor Mr. Brehm and club president Gregory Bergen invited several local photographers to lecture to the group and procured films about camera work. The club's booth at Club Carnival gave all comers a chance to be pictured. These photos were put on display in Times Square and demonstrated the skill of club members.

A variety of lectures, workshops, and projects helped Future Teachers of America to learn about their field of interest. At a fall meeting, Mr. Samuel, LT's exchange teacher, described teaching in England. Teaching techniques were further examined in a regional workshop, while misconduct problems were discussed in the movie, "Mark Makes His Mark." Members celebrated Christmas by giving a coin-bedecked tree to the Helping Hand School. The year's activity ended with a panel of exchange students who discussed foreign schools.

Directing activities toward gaining new insight into the nursing profession, the Future Nurses of America learned more about the field of medicine through field trips to the Museum of Science and Industry and to the Cook County Memorial Hospital. Movies on medical topics such as open-heart surgery illustrated modern techniques and advances. The club's fund-raising project, the sale of corsages at the Homecoming football game, provided a scholarship for a senior girl planning to become a nurse.

Bi-Phy-Chem, Astro-Science Seminar establish meeting

In an informal atmosphere, Bi-Phy-Chem, sponsored by Mr. Hanson and Mr. Rorke, provided an opportunity for aspiring scientists to meet and to exchange scientific ideas. Members' diverse interests became evident through their speeches, ranging in subject from Project Apollo and unidentified flying objects to computer programming. These interests were stimulated and new ones developed as, under the direction of Rich Zimmerman at North Campus and Randall Unsbee at South Campus, the club visited scientific displays in the Chicago area. Movies and guest lecturers gave members a clearer understanding of the place of science and research in our culture.

place for LT's aspiring scientists

Under the watchful eye of Mr. Clevenger, members of Astro-Science Seminar construct a simple model to illustrate a physics principle.

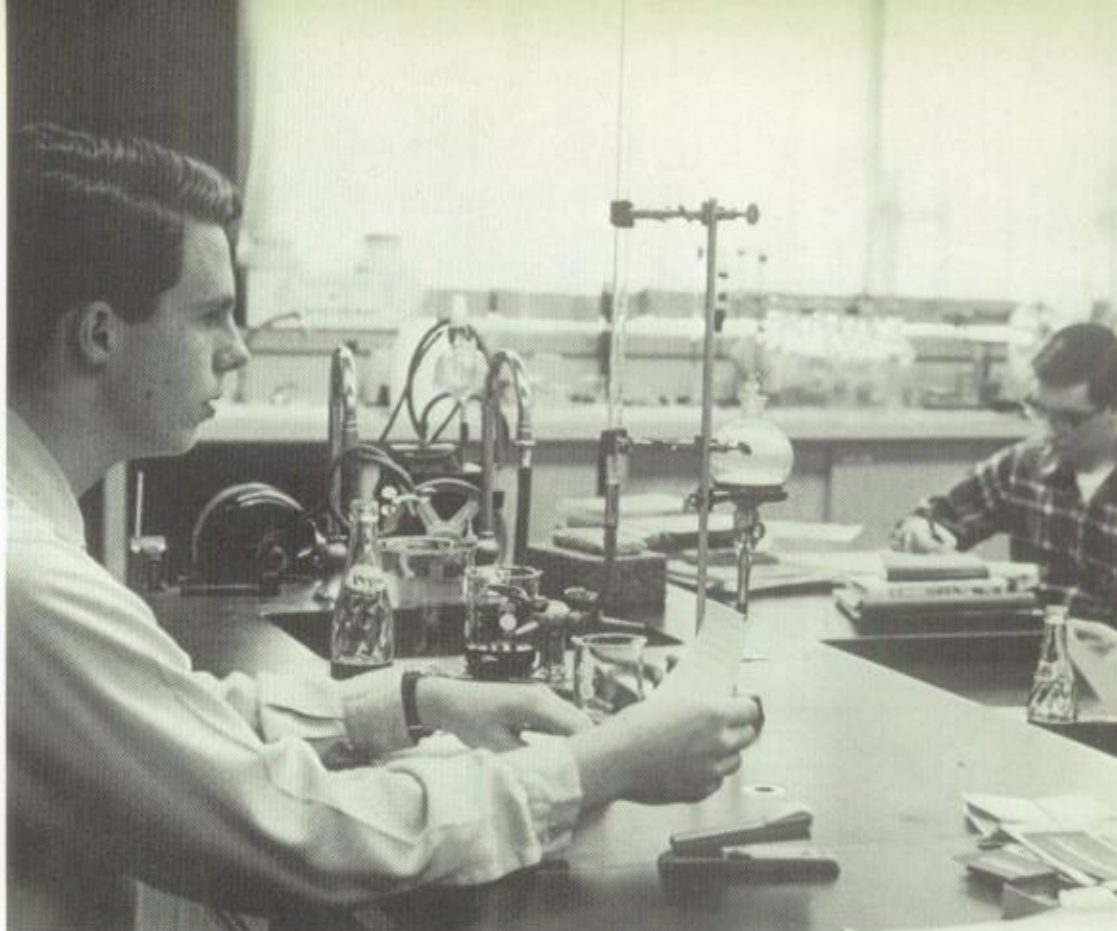

Astro-Science Seminar members must study accurate diagrams of their proposed telescope before turning to the actual construction of the instrument.

Fields ranging from photography to satellite dynamics interested members of Astro-Science Seminar. Discussion and argument were the key factors in formulating new ideas and broadening established ones, as seminar participants, led by president George Dizikes and sponsor Mr. Clevenger, heard presentations and debates by students and experts. Though the club's focus was mainly on astronomy and the completion of a six-inch telescope begun last year, young enthusiasts of photography and rocketry were also welcomed. Mathematics, optics, physics, and electronics also played important parts in Seminar activities for members who strove during the year to understand scientific principles in all fields relevant to astronomy.

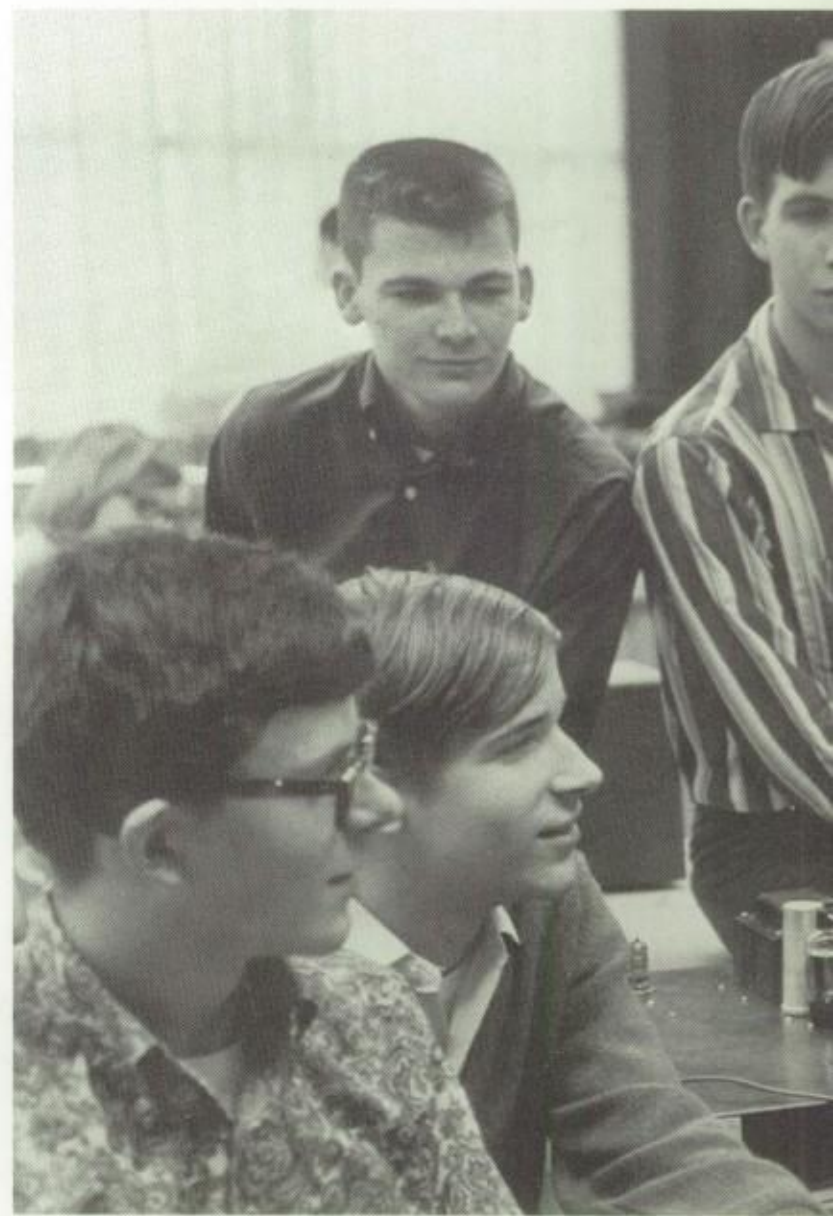

Proving old ideas and trying out new ones motivated the projects presented at the IIT Science Fair by members of Science Seminar. Those who placed in this exhibition went on to the State Science Fair at the U. of I. All projects which were prepared through the seminar represented an entire year of research and work in a particular scientific field. At weekly Monday meetings, students were required to report on their projects or on other subjects pertinent to the club's interest. Occasionally, guest speakers were asked to talk at the meetings. By the end of the year, members were expected to have become well-acquainted with their individual topics. Participants especially benefited from learning scientific procedures under minimum supervision and criticism on their own level.

The South Campus Science Seminar provides an opportunity for science students to pursue their interests outside the classroom.

stressed by Science Seminar, Computer Club

Not all newly-organized clubs can boast the success of the recently innovated Computer Club. With aid from sponsor Mr. Hammar, members concentrated on fulfilling their two-fold purpose: to create an active membership and to learn more about computer uses. After the club completed its constitution, President Wayne Harvey and vice-president Mike Milner taught members how to program and to operate a computer. Field trips to various industries and businesses included an inspection of the Chicago Police Department's computer facilities, a computer-controlled manufacturing and distributing company, the IBM training center, and the office recording all government transactions with the city of Chicago.

The work of the Human Relations Council was a bright illustration of LT's student determination to better understand social problems. Throughout the year, the council worked on achieving its one main objective: the success of Project Share, a program designed for tutoring underprivileged children in Chicago. Before embarking upon the project, council members attended Saturday workshops and heard Marshal Smith, head of the tutoring project in Chicago, give them advice concerning their part in the program. Supplementing this major activity, the council held a November book drive to raise money for a charitable organization. Council members met with Chicago teenagers and exchanged viewpoints and ideas at an overnight meeting at Beacon House.

Plans for the forthcoming Englewood-LT student exchange provide the basis for Alva Brassel's discussion with Human Relation council members.

Human Relations council members, anticipating becoming tutors, receive instructions on current teaching methods from president Don Matoush.

seek to serve beyond community level

"We Serve" was the motto and the fulfilled purpose of Key Club, a Kiwanis-affiliated organization introduced at LT this year. Boys maintaining at least a "C" average and abstaining from smoking and drinking could apply for membership. The organization's first activity, which was under the guidance of president Bill Bauer and sponsor Mr. Kraus, was the promotion of the school bond issue. In the spring members helped Kiwanis Club with its fund-raising Pancake Day, and other service projects, such as the assistance of Hines Hospital patients.

International action was the aim of Interact, the youth branch of Rotary International. In its first year at LT, the organization first had to establish itself and gain members. Once established on campus, the club dedicated itself to community service, fellowship and the development of leadership in its members. President Gary Rossbach, working with the adult Rotary, co-ordinated the club's participation in the muscular dystrophy drive and collected money for Chicago educational television.

On Friday afternoons in South Campus's south cafeteria, the members of Bridge Club gathered to improve their bidding and playing techniques in the truly intellectual card game. Duplicate bridge, in which all the tables play the same, pre-dealt hands, is perhaps the only card game in which luck is not a factor. The LT club's players, led by president Bruce Carhart, held a mid-winter tournament among themselves after unsuccessful attempts to have players from other schools compete.

A major portion of the members, however, were beginners who knew almost nothing about the methods or objectives of the game. Sponsor Mrs. Fields and members with some experience spent much of their time coaching the playing of these novices, many of whom by the year's end had become respectable players.

Bridge Club members discuss a bidding concept before picking up a new hand.

A Persian prayer rug joined two oil paintings contributed earlier as Stamp and Coin Club's Christmas gift to LT. Money for the rug, which was placed in the South Campus community room, was obtained through auctions open to the general public, a Club Carnival booth, and club savings. Both the beginner and the more sophisticated numismatist and philatelist profited from the movies and guest speakers which supplemented regular meetings. Each of the bi-weekly meetings held under the sponsorship of Mr. John Davis, was followed by a discussion and lively trading session in which members could augment individual collections.

Before other Ski Club members Bill McGee skillfully demonstrates the proper technique of fitting binding to boot.

Long before the first snowfall, Ski Club began intensive planning for their season. Comprised of both experienced and novice skiers, the club offered a chance to develop and perfect techniques while learning from fellow-enthusiasts. Under the leadership of president Mike Kelly, the club organized day-long trips to Wilmont-Gander Mountain, Mount Fugi, and other near-by ski centers. Members, with faculty sponsor Miss Miller, participated in three weekend trips to Michigan ski resorts, thus combining fun with instruction.

In order to further interest an appreciation of horses and horsemanship, Saddle and Spur this year offered members a variety of entertaining activities. Discussions, movies, and lectures, all co-ordinated under the leadership of president Judy Lindsey and sponsor Mrs. Jones, instructed members in the equestrian skills and formed the basis of club meetings. Highlights of the '66-'67 agenda included a trip to the International Horse Show, hayrides, and, as a final activity, the annual picnic ride.

From October until spring vacation, Bowling Club members assembled each week at La Grange Lanes to improve their technique and scores through practice matches. Members met and formed teams for inter-squad tournaments under the direction of Mr. Yena at South Campus and Mr. Hamilton at North Campus. Bowlers also participated in special events such as the Thanksgiving Turkey Shoot and other club contests. At the end of the year, the presentation of awards and trophies honored the organization's outstanding bowlers.

Under the guidance of Mr. Brown, members of Rifle Club learned basics of good marksmanship and strove to perfect skill in shooting. Periodically, the club's best marksmen met those of other clubs in the area. Activities in the club were highlighted by a Thanksgiving turkey shoot in which members competed against each other. The excellent range at South Campus provided an opportunity for members to observe shooting rules and to maintain the safety of the club's activity.

Radio Club inaugurates plans for FM station

A slight twist of the dials brings far-off stations into the Hamshack.

A slight adjustment of the right component brings this Radio Club project closer to completion in the radio shack atop the school.

Increased emphasis in the commercial aspect of broadcasting due to the formation of LT's new educational FM station characterized this year's Radio Club. Throughout the year sponsor Mr Warning helped members to prepare for their third class operator's licenses required by the FCC for disc jockeys and to work out the more technical aspects of the radio station. As they studied radio theory and Morse Code, members tested their communication skills by contacting other area high schools through LT's ham radio station, W9MYJ. Field trips to WTAQ and NBC, and workshops with other West Suburban radio clubs, rounded out the year's activities.

It was full steam ahead this year for LTHO, LT's model railroad club. Under the direction of president Tom White and sponsor Mr. Hursh, club members worked tirelessly on the roadbed of their train layout in the South Campus basement. This long-term project will provide a strong base for future club expansion, since it offers a more permanent and efficient means of utilizing club equipment. Giving meetings variety were lectures by guest speakers and films demonstrating various technical aspects of railroad-ing. A trip to a railroad yard for more practical first-hand knowledge rounded out a year of activity for members.

Red Cross manages service projects, raises funds

This year a series of programs especially geared to cover the interests of all members attracted many to North Campus Home Ec Club. "Careers in Home Economics," a presentation for serious-minded members, kicked off a schedule including a make-up demonstration, by Merle Norman, the spring fashion show, a counseling session with columnist Edan Wright, and a tour of O'Hare Airport's foods areas. Christmas and Eastertime welfare projects provided an expression of community awareness while broadening members' experience.

Distribution of baskets of food at Thanksgiving marked the beginning of a full program of service and welfare projects for Junior Red Cross. Under the direction of Mrs. Blum and Mr. Hogan, Christmas was celebrated by carolling at several local nursing homes. Profits from the sale of green carnations on St. Patrick's Day were donated to Community Memorial Hospital for their new addition. After their annual spring drive, LT's chapter was officially enrolled in the Junior Red Cross. Running a Club Carnival booth and initiating new officers at a picnic brought the club's schedule to a close.

Aides, by substituting work for study, keep special services at LT running efficiently. Delivering notices is the main job of office aides, while audio-visual aides operate and maintain equipment to expand classroom facilities. Such tasks as taking temperatures and doing paperwork are handled daily by Health Service aides. The work of library aides, checking out books and sending over-due reminders, left librarians free to advise more students. For door guards, lunch periods serve as a chance both to catch up on homework and to supervise unauthorized traffic in the halls. A spring banquet expressed the school's appreciation for aides' contribution to LT life.

ATHLETICS

When people discuss high school athletics and athletes, they are probably picturing the tall, well-built boys and the pretty, bouncy cheerleaders that they find in magazine advertisements. For each superstar, however, there are hundreds of other students who have gained the benefits that competitive sports offer.

A person can usually pick the athletes out of the crowd.

There is something about the way they stand that reflects the hours of practice that they have undergone. Something in their alert gaze reveals the self-control that marks the difference between a true competitor and a glory-seeker. Since the mental and physical control that athletics demand are an integral part of all phases of life, most athletes do become better students and more responsible young adults.

Triumphant Lions claw way to fourth straight

The 1966 season marked the fourth successive year that LT's Varsity Football team captured first place in the West Suburban Conference. Although previously recognized as favorites due to their two-year record as Frosh-Soph champions, the Lions lost to Oak Park in a pre-conference clash. This defeat proved to be the only setback for the team and Coach J. O. Jackson. As predicted, the Lions defeated Proviso West, R-B, and Maine East. Next, a 7-7 tie with Hinsdale forced LT into a second place, with undefeated Glenbard in the lead. The Downers Grove and York games were high-scoring routs that brought LT's record to 5-0-1. In the final game, Glenbard West, holding a 6-0-0 record, played and lost to LT, permitting the Lions to gain the conference championship.

By forcing the R-B quarterback to hurry his throw, the varsity line tries to set up another pass interception.

Capitalizing on opponents' mistakes, Coach Burson's Frosh-Soph Football team began the season with a series of victories. After defeating non-conference Oak Park with a good defense and a steady game, the Cubs were later overcome by Proviso West in their first conference clash. Playing each game without looking ahead to the next Saturday proved the best strategy for the Cubs in their defeats of R-B and Maine East. Mid-season losses of key men snapped the LT winning streak, placing the last four games in the loss column.

game action exciting but outcome disappointing

Solid interior blocking was one of the little-acknowledged keys to the addition of precious yard to LT's offense.

The Frosh-Soph huddle forms as LT's quarterback takes one more moment to match his next play with the opponent's defensive weakness.

In various poses of anticipation, the tense frosh-soph bench awaits action.

The characteristic pause of any quarterback is that precious few seconds he takes to try to spot an open receiver.

LT's Varsity Soccer team compiled a disappointing 2-11-1 record, although they followed a rigorous schedule and made a commendable effort in pre-season practice. The hand-oriented Lions, organized as a soccer team only last year, had to concentrate on footwork and a sound knowledge of the fundamentals of the game. After a discouraging losing streak, the soccermen scored their first victory against St. Joseph. Lacking experience and an offense with an effective scoring punch, the Lions were then shut out in four consecutive games. They successfully finished the season, defeating St. Joe and tying St. Mel.

The use of drills to increase stamina and to accustom team members to basic plays helped the Frosh-Soph Soccer team compile an impressive 7-3-4 record. In handing a 2-1 defeat to Roncalli, the Cubs built up team spirit, which carried them through their remaining games. Although the team was victorious over New Trier East and Waukegan, their victory over Main East, because it was a West Suburban Conference inter-scholastic soccer team, was generally considered to be its important win.

With only three returning lettermen, the Varsity Cross Country team finished fifth in an 0-5-2 slate. The team, however, was stronger than its record indicated, for in two non-conference meets Mr. Armer's harriers defeated both Oak Park and Proviso East. Also, in the district meet, they finished second, losing only to perennial power York. Junior Tom Halloron, as a result of a first place finish in this race, represented LT in the state meet.

After diligent practice, Coach Jon Knowles' Frosh-Soph Cross Country squad finished with a 2-5 record in the West Suburban Conference and a 4-5 record for all meets. Victories over Oak Park, Downers Grove, and Hinsdale aided the team's spirit. The coach felt that the loss of three sophomores to the varsity at the beginning of the season hurt their chances for a conference crown.

Varsity cagers rack up 8-6 conference record,

In a well executed play, Doug Faulds adds two points toward LT's eventual victory over York.

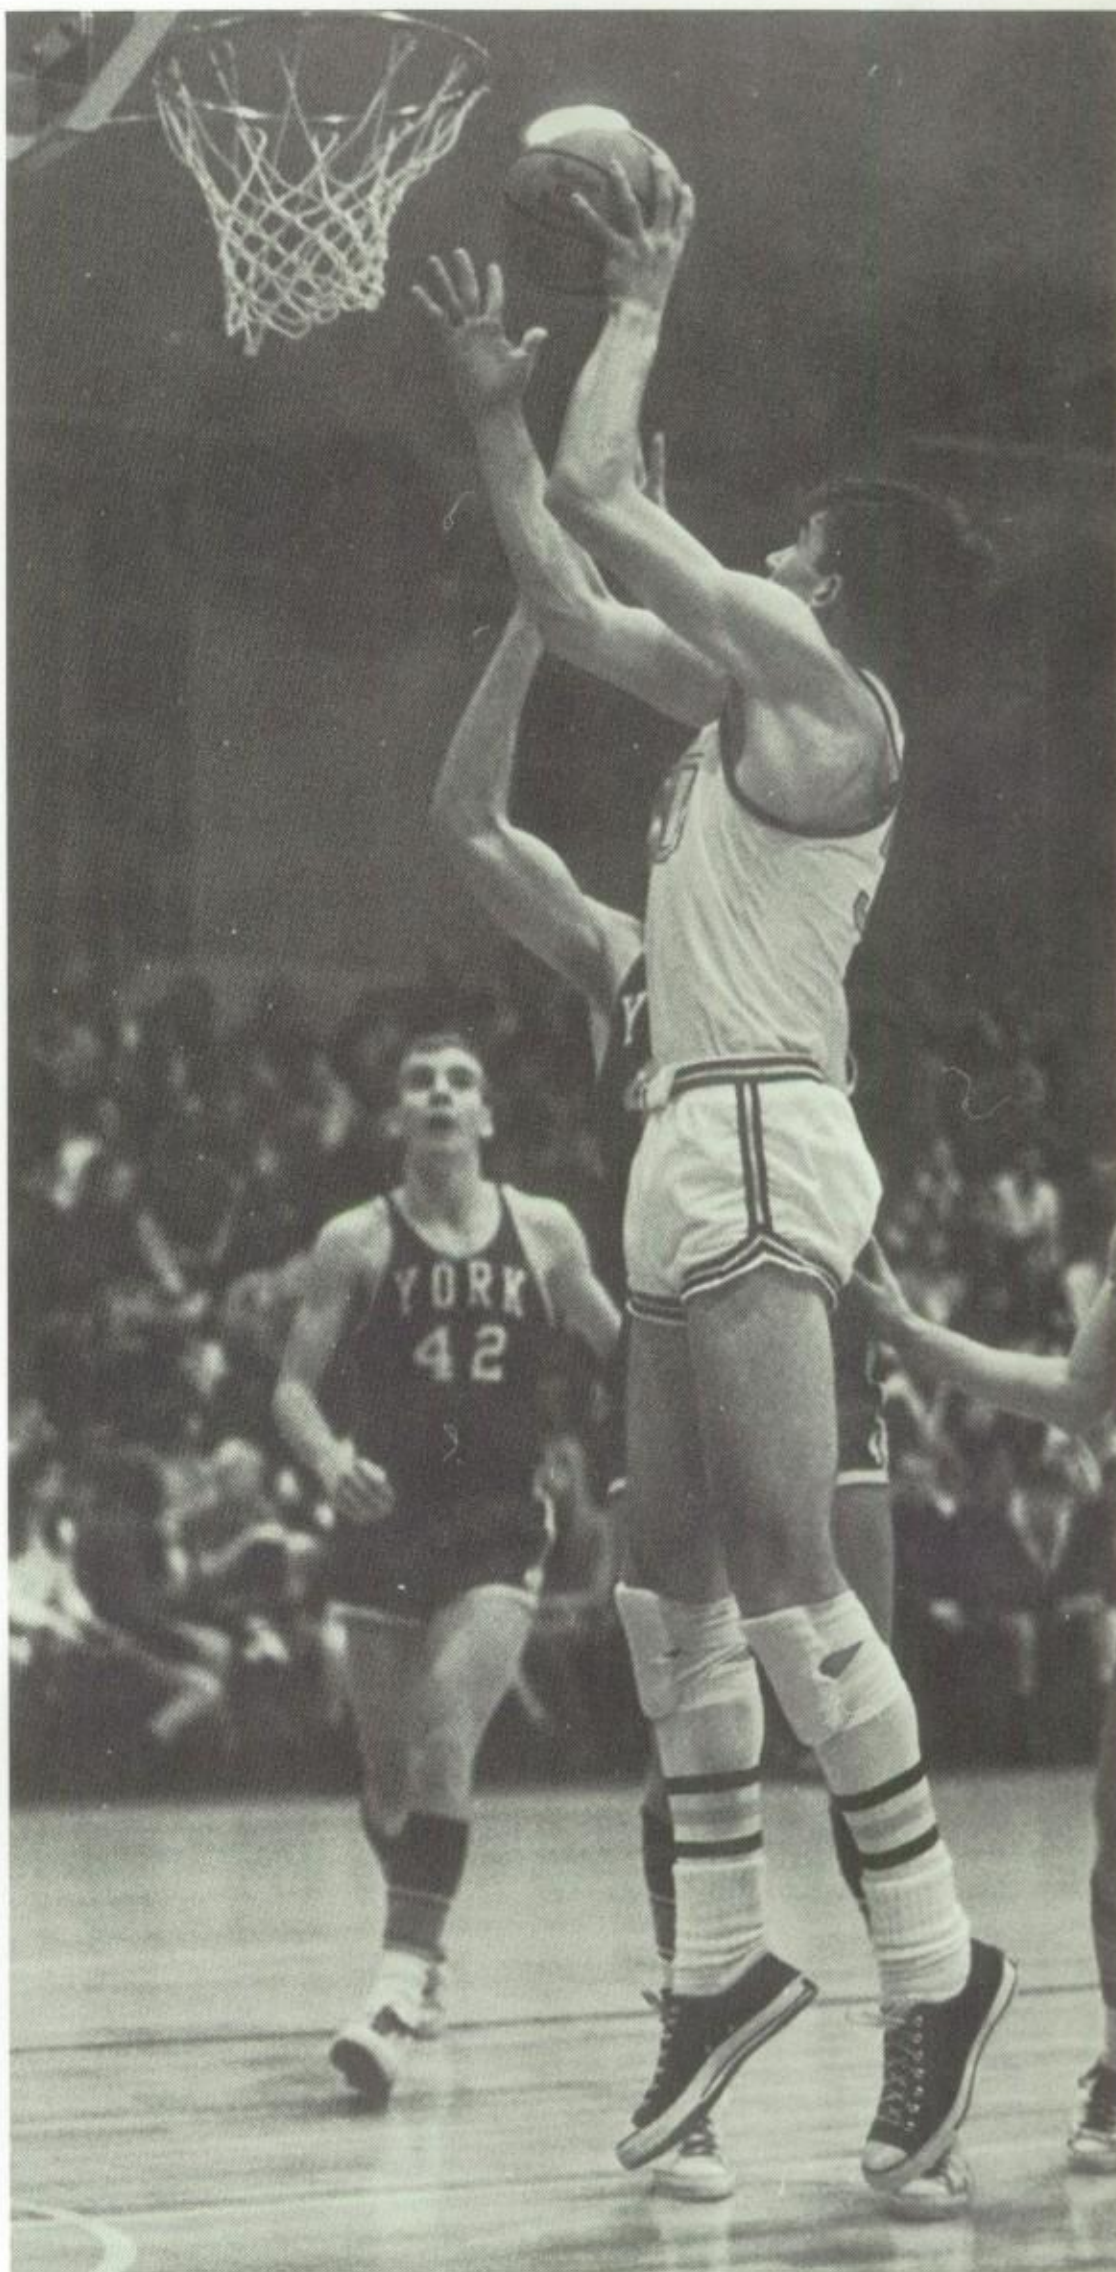

Playing in one of the hardest conferences in the state, the Varsity Basketball Team finished the season with a commendable 8-6 record. Pre-season non-conference clashes involved New Trier, Homewood-Flossmoor, and Thornton, three of the toughest teams in the Chicago area. In each case Coach Art Sandusky's Lion's were defeated. They were ready, however, when the season started, as was evidenced by conference victories over Proviso West, Maine East, and Riverside-Brookfield. Without losing their spirit the Lions were defeated by Hinsdale Central, Downers Grove North, and York. Partly in revenge for the three setbacks, the club overwhelmed Glenbard West. The Lions outscored Proviso and Maine East before they faced rematches with Hinsdale, Downers, and York. After the cagers lost the first two games, Coach Sandusky revealed some new strategy against York: slowing down and playing for an easy shot. This new offense combined with a good defense and a high level of spirit to defeat the Dukes, a team that later advanced to the quarter finals of the state tournament. The Lions ended their season by sandwiching a victory over Glenbard between losses to R-B.

A half-court battle between guards is won by York, but a travelling call seems imminent.

Compiling an excellent 15-5 overall record in a very good season, the Frosh-Soph Basketball Team finished second in the West Suburban Conference for the third straight year. After the 1-2 record established in the pre-season non-conference clashes, the Cubs went on to win five games in a row, including a one point decision over R-B, their closest contender for second place. York, the eventual first place holder was the first to blemish the Cubs' conference record. The sophomores then won their next seven games, including three on route to first place in the St. Charles Christmas Tournament. Downers Grove North ended their streak and revenge their earlier defeat at the hands of the Cubs. A spirited club outshot and outplayed York, but victory left them too tired to be any match for R-B the next morning. Glenbard was completely overpowered as the Cubs, anxious to end the season well, put together their highest point total of the season.

Concluding their season with another outstanding record of 10-2 the Frosh-Soph Swimming Team showed their opponents that they continue to be a team to be reckoned with. The first six meets were victories, including a 72-23 victory over Hinsdale South, and a 77-17 rout of Lockport. Homewood-Flossmoor tankmen surprised the Cubs in the Viking's pool and dealt them their first defeat of the season. Oak Park fell to our swimmers next, but powerful Hinsdale Central limited the sophomores to their lowest point total. Proviso West and Riverside-Brookfield were defeated before the Frosh-Soph team earned their greatest point total of the season in a victory over Thornton.

The Varsity Swimming Team had a hard schedule, but the Lions, with twelve returning lettermen met the challenge, compiling a 9-3 record. Defeating their first seven adversaries, the Sea Lions prepared for the toughest opponents on their schedule. Oak Park narrowly defeated the varsity, but state champion Hinsdale Central held the Lions to their lowest score of the year. Proviso West, another strong team, also defeated the seniors, but the team came back to swamp Riverside-Brookfield and Thornton. The Lions finished their season by capturing second in the conference meet, second in the district meet, and placed higher than any other LT swimming team in a state meet.

The lack of constant scoring performances partially accounted for a low finish by the Frosh-Soph Wrestling team, Coach Art Suchomel felt that the team, though talented, was hurt by bad breaks and that improving teams pushed the Cubs into a three-way tie for fifth place. In one of their most exciting matches of the season, the Cubs defeated Downers Grove by two points. Improved spirit helped the team beat York by another two-point margin, but critical mistakes hurt sophomores' efforts as they dropped their meet with last place Glenbard West. The Cubs bounced back, however, with their final match defeat of Holy Cross.

By molding eight returning lettermen into an effective unit, Coach Bert Kraus' Varsity Wrestling team retained their first place standing. The early matches were against their toughest adversaries, including last year's state champs, Thornton and Waukegan. However, after their loss to Thornton in a triangular meet, the varsity's only defeat was with Carl Sandburg. Their string of victories included resounding victories over York, Glenbard West, and Holy Cross. The highest number of positions on the all-conference team and Tom Hutchinson's third place position in the state meet further attested to the Lion's talent.

Compiling their best record ever, the Frosh-Soph Gymnastics Team could have done better had they not lost key men to the varsity team for most of the season. Beginning the season right, the Cubs defeated Oak Lawn and Wheaton North before being defeated by powerful Proviso East, Rich Central, Hinsdale South, Oak Park, York, and Glenbard West. When sophomore gymnasts who had been participating in varsity meets returned, the team outscored Proviso East, Riverside-Brookfield, and Maine East. In the last dual meet, the Cubs lost to Hinsdale Central, but made an excellent showing in the conference meet, finishing tied for third place with Glenbard West.

Their season comprising a 1-10-1 record, the Varsity Gymnastics team competed with some of the top suburban teams. Proviso East, Proviso West, York, and Hinsdale Central, the usual gymnastic powers, handled the Lions easily as did Oak Lawn before Wheaton North edged the Lions by the slimmest margin and Hinsdale South tied LT's grapplers. The Lions were victims in the next four meets before they overcame Riverside-Brookfield 69½-62½. The last two contests failed to improve the record. Although the team spirit did not show up in the won-lost column, it was counted a positive competition factor.

Straining in an all-out effort during practice, Mike Briskey concentrates on his next side horse maneuver.

The long stretch by first baseman Fred Brooks may make the split-second difference between an out and an infield hit.

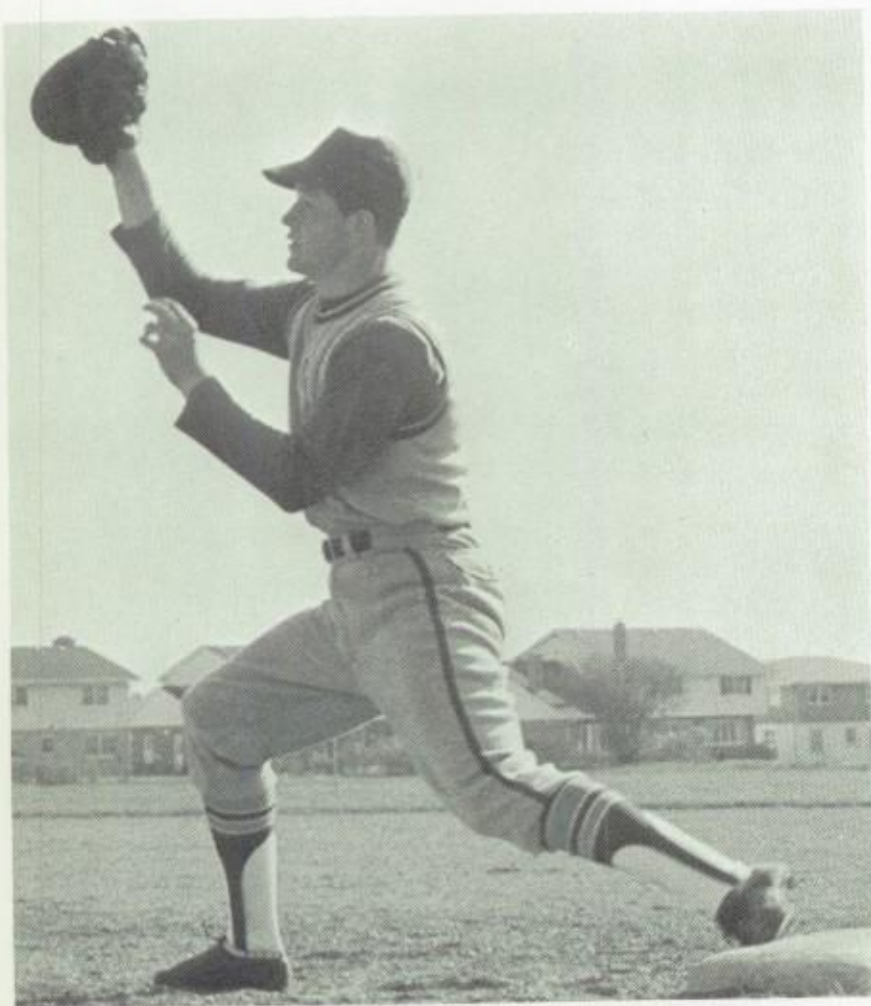

A strong pitching staff with a couple of steady hitters presented the Frosh-Soph Baseball Team with a good chance to capture first place after three years in second. The Cubs had three able pitchers, a fairly sure-handed infield, and a reliable outfield, combined with steady hitting. This combination provided the team with the depth needed to place high in the standings. Coach Bob Burson relied enthusiastically upon the sophomores, who as freshmen finished in second place, to aid in LT's drive to keep the President's Cup.

A big, well-balanced squad, the Varsity Baseball Team, became one of the best baseball teams the school has ever had. Eight returning lettermen and a well-stocked pitching staff helped LT sweep the conference, the regional, and some sectional games. The team compiled a 20-plus win record without a loss as they hungrily eyed the possibility of becoming the second undefeated team in state high school history.

The addition of several freshmen to the nucleus of experienced sophomores built the Frosh-Soph Track Team into a formidable squad. A successful indoor season, highlighted by victories over Proviso East, Naperville, and Maine East, and a first place in the Oak Park quadrangular prepared the Cubs for the outdoor season. Hurdling events, an early weakness in the sophomores' attack, were remedied by mid-season. Coach Jim Kilbreth, predicted that the Cubs would have an excellent chance for first place in the conference.

Utilizing many returning veterans, the Varsity Track Team continues the success of the indoor season into their outdoor schedule. The Lions, anticipating the season by starting training late in January, gained valuable experience. Highlights of the indoor season were the Lions' first dual meet victory in four years, over Maine East 56-53 and a second place in the conference meet. Coach Max Armer expected the confidence and team spirit gained this competition to boost the Lions' outdoor performance.

Diligent practice before the season helped Mr. Martin's Frosh-Soph Tennis Team members to gain the precision needed for successful competition. Overcoming the drawback of no returning numeral winners, the squad made up with effort what they lacked in experience.

The Varsity Tennis Team contended for top honors in the conference, improving on last year's fourth place finish. Four senior lettermen as well as a talented squad of juniors strengthened the team. A period of indoor practice polished the team's playing and could mean the difference between first and third places to Mr. Nemecek's team.

Coach Art Suchomel's weight-lifting program helped develop strength in the arms and hands of members of the Frosh-Soph Golf Team, improving their chances for a higher standing than last year's third place. Though the team lacked experience, they were still a strong championship contender.

Ambitions of the Varsity Golf Team to hold its conference and district titles were likely to become a reality as the team prepared to make a better showing in the state meet. Coach Bert Kraus relied on the experience of four returning lettermen in matches against Glenbard West, a top title contender, and other strong schools in the conference.

Scott Bradley keeps his eyes riveted on the ball as he prepares to slam a serve across the net.

Intramural program aims for conditioning, fun;

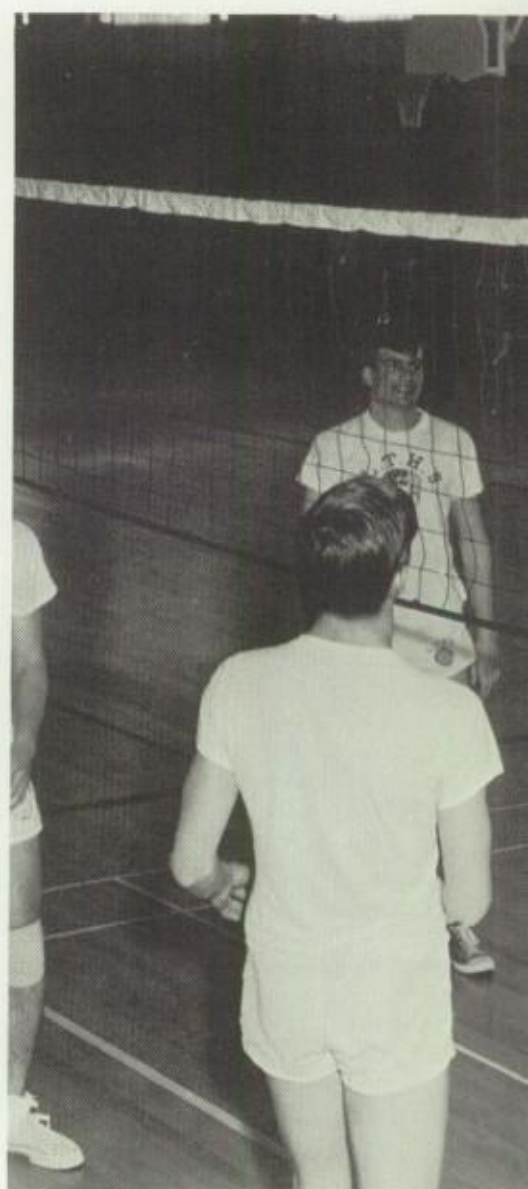

Indoor track events are the raincheck for a scheduled baseball game.

Aiming to enrich the program presented in the regular gym classes for any interested participant, Intramural Sports strove to diversify its activities, trying to cater to every boy's interest. In the fall season, the gym classes were supplemented by basketball and tennis programs. The free time over Christmas vacation was utilized by an "elimination" basketball tournament held at South Campus. In early February the weight-lifting program was started to broaden the schedule, thus including more boys. The final activity was the spring softball tournament. In all cases the boys felt that both exercise and enjoyment were the most important results of the program.

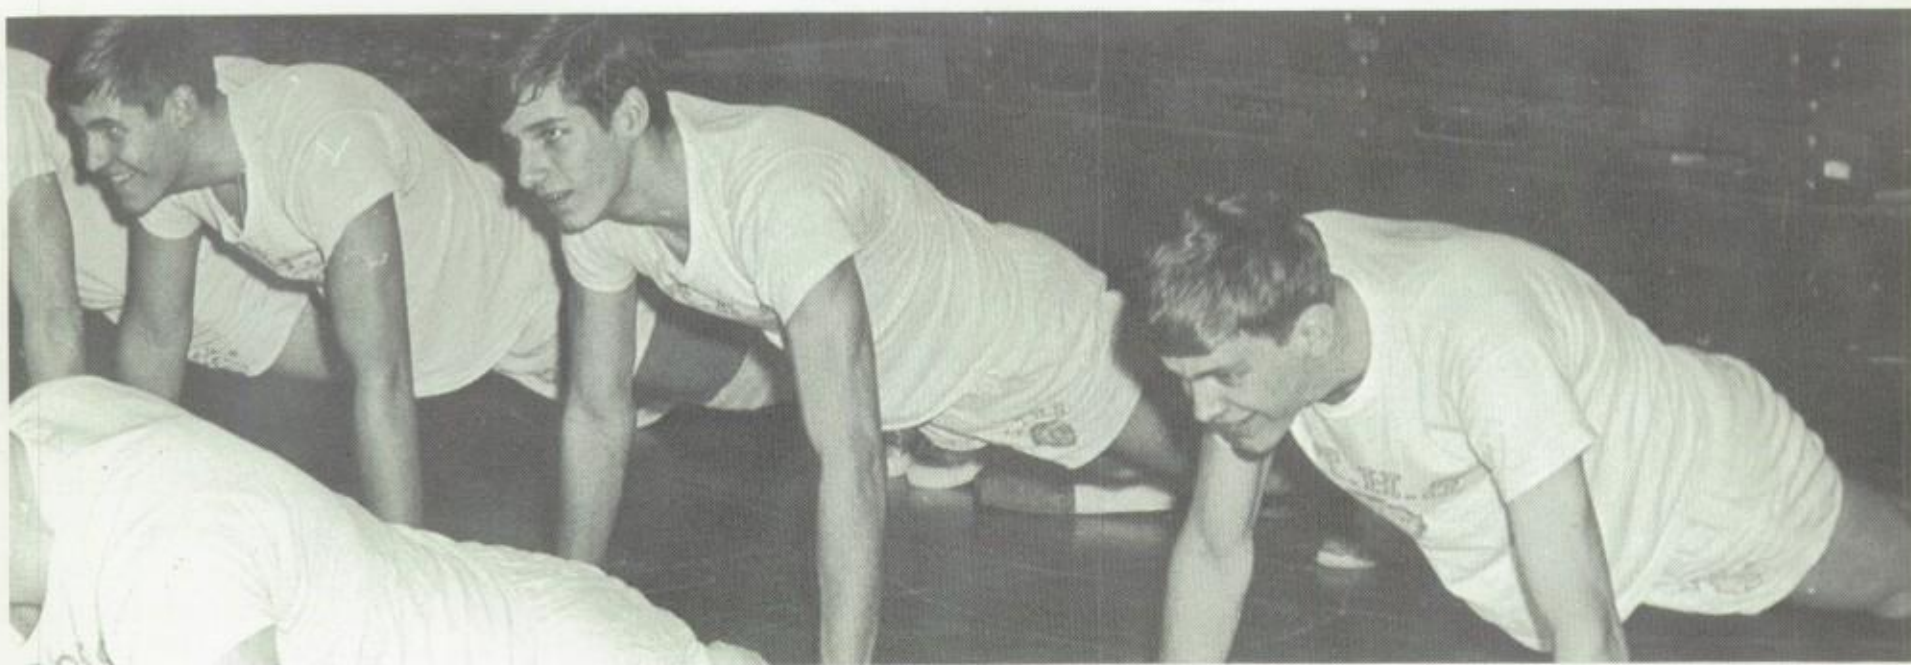

Everyone can find a sport to fit his skills and interests in the intramural program.

While retaining several traditions, the Girls Athletic Association also made changes to promote greater interest in the organization. The board this year included officers plus four major committees, which helped it to follow members' suggestions more ably. The policy of change was also revealed in the initiation of a co-ed archery shoot and a party at which Mr. Jackson, varsity football coach, spoke on how to watch football intelligently. Such traditional functions as Dad 'n' Daughter Night, the mother-daughter dinner, a Christmas tea for former board members, Club Carnival, and the spring dance were also included. Inter-school playdays and service projects promoted community interest in GAA.

All smiles and pep, the Cheerleaders promoted school spirit at many memorable sports events. After two vigorous practices a week, the squad was ready to display their sparkling acrobatics for each game's crowd. The girls were also responsible for selling football programs and Homecoming buttons and delivering a cheering routine on "Chuck Bennett Night," a program held in November to honor the former director of athletics. Whether keeping the crowd united with their routines at a noisy basketball game or proudly holding the hoop for the football team, the girls were a colorful part of LT's athletic events.

The six members of the LT Twirling squad demonstrated their skill in co-ordinating foot movement, rhythm, and twirling at all home football and basketball games. During practice sessions, the girls increased precision while developing new routines. Although activity terminated temporarily following the basketball season, spring brought practicing for the State Twirling Contest and for the Memorial Day parade. Utilizing their talents, the twirlers provided entertainment for audiences while gaining satisfaction from accomplishment.

Contributing to school spirit with intricate and precise routines, Pom-Pon Squad, led by co-captains Toni Meyer and Kathy Stout, provided entertainment at sports events and during pep assemblies. In a year highlighted by performance in the State Street parade, squad members sold pom-poms and sponsored a sock-hop to finance new equipment. Hours of practice resulted in synchronized performances, and, supervised by Mrs. Novy and Miss Sullivan, the squad created colorful routines.

SPECIAL EVENTS

A myriad of special events interrupted the monotony of school routine. The entire student body joined in the festivities of Homecoming weekend, feting returning alumni, conquering in an exciting football game, and whirling through the magic of the climaxing dance. Later in the year musically talented students, heralding changing seasons, joined in a series of exuberant concerts that were marked by vigorous interpretations of both contemporary and classical music. Other students escaped farther from the daily academic regimen by abandoning their own identities for dramatic roles in a wide variety of school productions. Enriched and revitalized by the wide range of special events, we returned to our classes more ready to face the day-to-day routine of school.

Pep rally, parade, dance are key chapters in novel

Returning to LT after twenty-five years, alumni of the class of '42 were honored at the 1966 Homecoming, "The Greatest Story Ever Told." Workers strained their creativity to devise and construct floats during the week before the festivities. On Friday night, students gathered at the Vaughn Gym for the Pep Assembly, "Great Expectations." A thunderous demonstration of class and school spirit, pom-pom and cheerleading routines, and an original skit preceded the announcement that Kathy Kading had been elected Homecoming queen. Expectations were fulfilled the next day as class and club floats were paraded under the theme, "Walk the Wide World." Saturday's game, "Under the Lion's Paw," proved worthy of its theme, as LT's Lions trounced the Downers Grove Trojans, 35-13. After the game, the foot parade, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," and the semi-formal dance, "Tender is the Night," brought a dramatic climax to the weekend's activities.

Lucia contributes South American touch to campus,

From her seat on the AFS convertible, Lucia recognizes familiar faces from the throng at the Homecoming parade.

This year, Brazil contributed a touch of Latin beauty to LT in the person of Lucia Martins. Lucia left her home in Sao Paulo to spend a year with the family of Bev and Jack Fink. While making many new friends in school, Lucia also kept in touch with fellow AFSers in the area.

Having never before seen snow, Lucia was even more surprised than suburban residents at the record-breaking snowfall in the Chicago area. "It's beautiful when I'm looking at it through a window, but I can't stay out in it long. My hands get too cold."

There was very little difference between the school work in Sao Paulo and that in La Grange, Lucia found. Her favorite subject was The Human Enterprise because she was interested in learning about different cultures and philosophies. Her speech class helped her each time she had the added duty of speaking to various social and business groups in the community. The friendliness with which Lucia delivered these speeches increased her range of friends while promoting the foreign student program in the area.

Lucia is exposed to still another facet of American life, as she helps Mrs. Fink prepare dinner.

Sweden's Jan-Erik adapts well to LT;

Waiting patiently for Mrs. Stewart to serve tea, Jan anticipates a typical American dessert of chocolate cake.

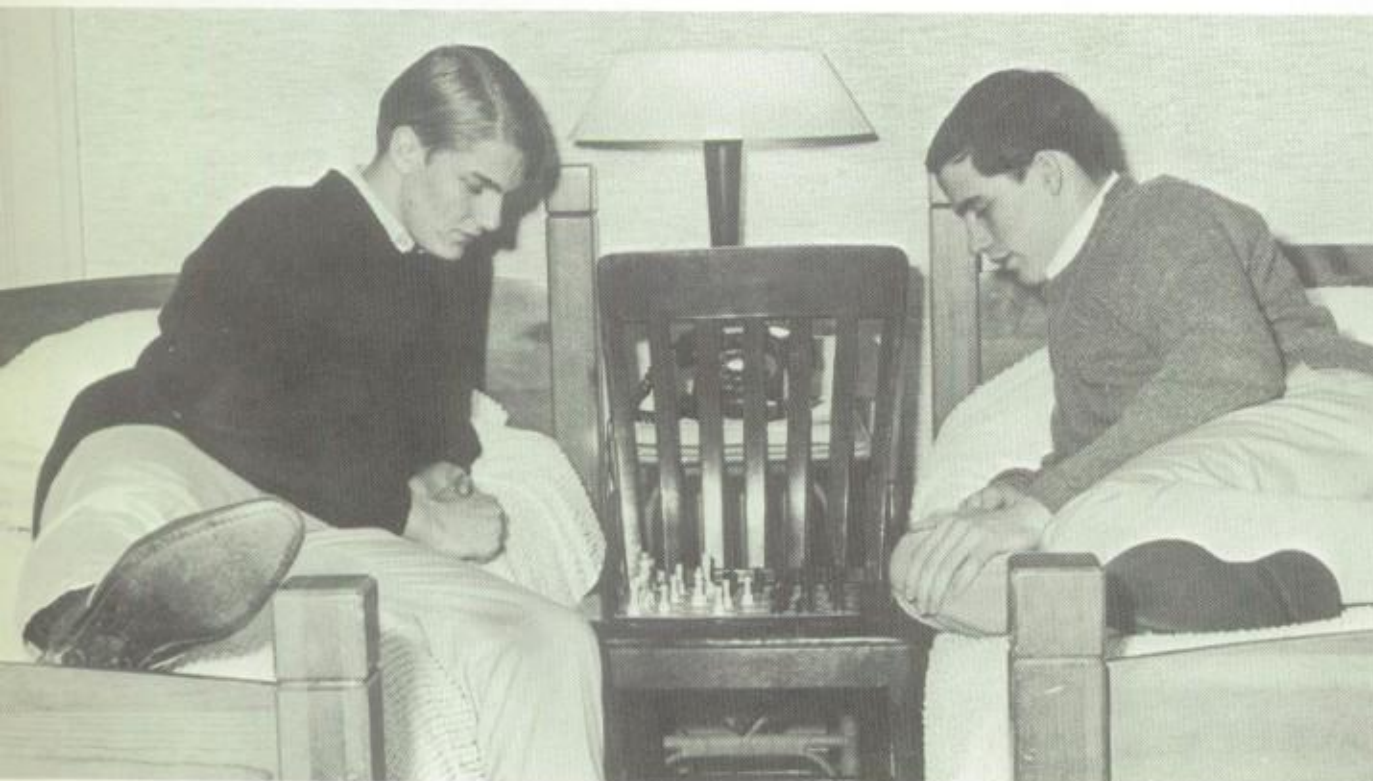

Everyone knows that all Swedes are tall, blond, blue-eyed, and good-looking, so LT students were somewhat prepared for Jan-Erik Damber. Jan fit our mental picture of him perfectly, from his six-feet-five-inch frame to his congenial smile of greeting.

Thanks to his extroverted personality, he had little trouble adapting to his new country. He spent his first two weeks in Michigan with his American family, the Stewarts. At his new family's cottage, Jan had a chance to get acquainted with American life before he was caught up in the rush of school life.

Since September 7 he has been kept busy coping with not only his school work but also with extracurricular activities. He found that dating is fun and homework is not, no matter what side of the Atlantic one is on.

In the spring, Jan demonstrated his prowess on the tennis team. Playing in the first singles spot, he helped the team to its strong finish in the conference competition. With all these pursuits Jan was one of the most active foreign student's LT has had.

Books and sports temporarily aside, Jeff and Jan turn to the universal field of the chessboard.

Summer Workshop stages Sound of Music;

The thunderstorm seems less menacing when Maria and the children recall the tale of the lonely goatherd.

Theatre Workshop, a summer course limited to seventy students from local high schools, produced The Sound of Music last summer. In the musical, Maria, a young postulant, leaves her Austrian convent to become governess to Captain Von Trapp's seven lively children, whom she teaches to substitute song for military discipline. Maria and the captain fall in love and are married, but Captain Von Trapp is ordered to take a German naval command. In the end, the entire family manages to escape to Switzerland after a diversionary musical performance in Nazi-occupied Austria.

In addition to the musical production, the Workshop group journeyed to Stratford, Canada, where they attended several Shakespearean plays and interviewed the players backstage to learn theatrical techniques.

Rhinoceros, fall production, criticizes conformity

To the disbelief of his friend Berenger, Jean, disillusioned with humanity, slowly transforms himself into a rhinoceros.

Trying to convince her that she must not join her friends by becoming a rhinoceros, Berenger enumerates to Daisy the advantages of remaining a human being.

LT's Fall Play opened the year with Rhinoceros, a theatre of the absurd satire on conformity. The play depicted an average town inhabited by seemingly ordinary people. The citizens were horrified as they saw that one, then another, and another of their neighbors were beginning to change into rhinoceroses. Disgust changed to envy as each member of the community longed to change into a rhinoceros. The final scene revealed a town populated by a herd of rhinoceroses and one unyielding individualist. Highlights in the script were a stampede of rhinos and the gradual transformation of a man into a rhinoceros. The colorful costumes emphasized the absurdity of the provocative script and were styled to fit the personalities of the characters.

Prince Hamlet exacts an oath of secrecy from the only other witnesses to the appearance of his father's ghost.

Selfish desires and hatred manifest themselves in murderous plots, revenge, and eventual tragedy in Hamlet, this year's Winter Play. Stagecraft classes constructed a formal set consisting of a complex of stairs, platforms, projections, and a thrust stage. The costumes, in various shades of blue, unified the characters while contrasting sharply against stark gray scenery. Masterful lighting and special effects, such as the ghost of Hamlet's father, which flashed red against the auditorium wall, helped create the proper atmosphere for the play. Students cast as Hamlet and Laertes received special instruction in fencing as preparation for the famous final scene. Skillful editing and convincing the Workshop group journeyed to Stratford, characterizations distinguished this production of Hamlet.

Fear of a prolonged drought and concern for an unmarried daughter provide the central conflicts in the Theatre Board's production of The Rainmaker written by N. Richard Nash. The Currys, a typical western family in the early twentieth century, live with worries which eventually become hopes when the fast-talking rainmaker appears. Mr. Curry has faith in the newcomer as a rainmaker while Lizzie finds the love her family had been seeking for her. Although commonplaceness is emphasized throughout, the play, written for a seven-member cast, requires five pages to enumerate the list of props, including fried eggs, bread and jam, a circus lantern, and two saddles. A stationary set of the Currys' living room, saddle room, and the sheriff's office create a unified effect.

Lizzie's first love is Bill Starbuck, rainmaker by profession, the glamorous stranger who temporarily alleviates the problems of the Curry family.

Talent unlimited dominates Choir

The happy life of Carnival hides an undercurrent of sadness, as Lili learns in this year's Choir Operetta. At first overawed by the magic tricks and flattery of Marco the Magnificent, Lili sees the world as a carefree circus. Paul Berthalet, the crippled puppeteer, who sees only the dark side of life, tries to shake Lili from her dreams. Unable to communicate with her, Paul shows his real feelings only through his puppets. Lili is torn between Marco's deceptive kindness and Paul's seemingly cruel, but sincere concern. The musical ends with Lili facing reality and Paul feeling the beauty of their love for each other.

Supporting the complex emotions of the main characters was the gay pattern of the carnival. The colorful, especially constructed inner proscenium arch framed the stage. Acrobats, clowns, dancers, and venders romped through the brightly-lit set to raucous music. Cast members learned to juggle and perform sleight-of-hand tricks for their roles, while others operated and spoke for the puppets.

A frightened Lili looks on as Paul vents his anger toward Marco in a blow knocking the arrogant magician to the ground.

The effect of Paul's harsh words is registered in the face of a sorrowful Jaquot.

Operetta—Carnival

An innocent Lili finds the persuasions of Marco to be enticingly romantic.

The colorful, exciting atmosphere of the carnival is enhanced by the talents of one of the jugglers, Tom Ryan.

As Joan bravely looks on, Warwick, the English representative, warns the court that they will later regret their harsh sentences.

Lark challenges audience, actors; Obirin revue

The traditional story of Joan of Arc was seen through the eyes of playwright Jean Anouilh in this year's South Campus Play, The Lark. Through a series of flashbacks, Joan relived the events which led to her witchcraft trial and eventual conviction and death. The conflict of Joan's belief in the saints' voices which guide her and the disapproval of the Inquisition court provided the substance of the drama.

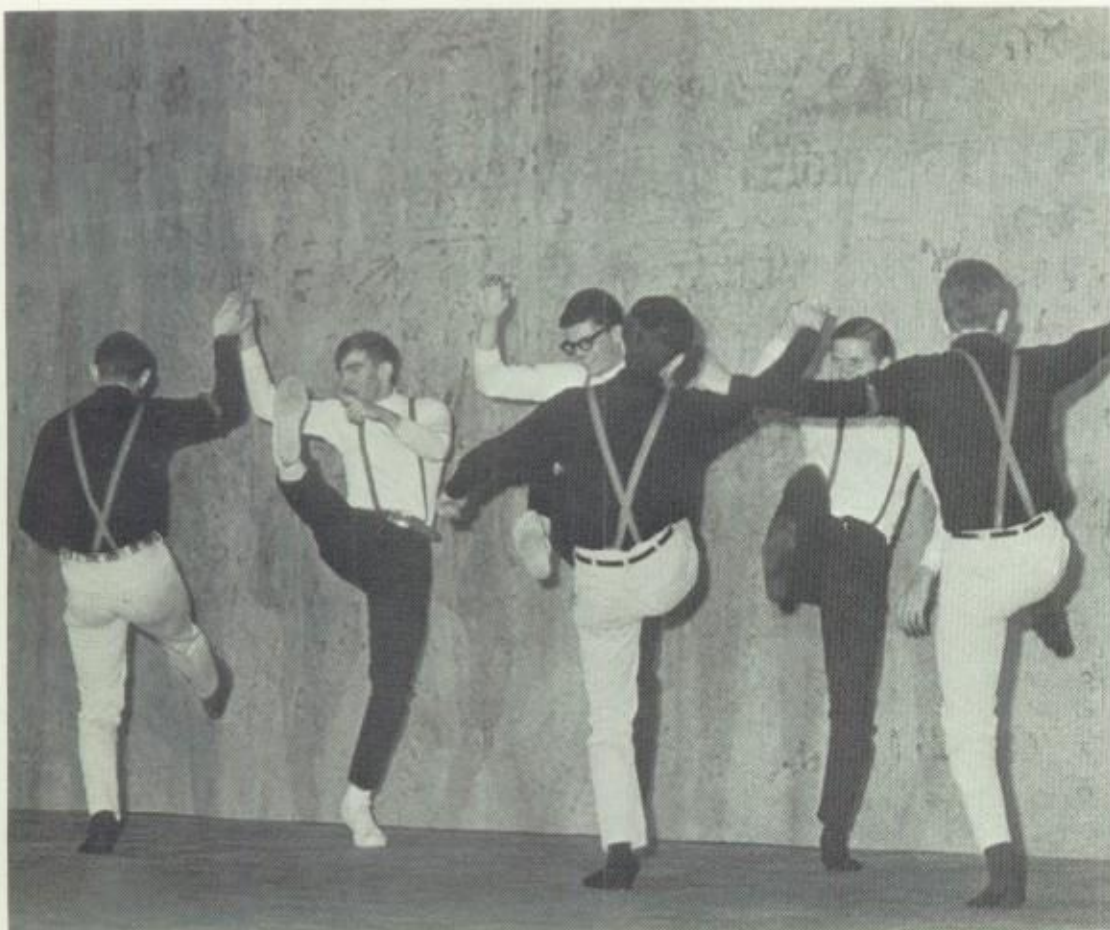

The set represented the courts and countryside of medieval France. Varying set levels and unique lighting created the desired effects. The transition from present to past was deftly handled in the challenging production.

"1,2,3, kick!" comes the cry as these senior boys have fun running through a rehearsal of their pink panther chorus line for Obirin Show.

The long-gone days of vaudeville were brought back for this year's Obirin Show, the annual fund-raising project for Obirin-Gauken, LT's sister school in Japan. Widespread publicity and ticket selling campaigns paid off in a record $485 taken in. "We're Playing the Palace" featured a variety of acts unified by a red-black-white color scheme and accompaniment of the Marshall Trio. Singers, dancers, chorus lines, a combo, and skits showcased LT talent from both campuses. Highlighting the show was a senior boys' chorus line whose performance of the Swan Lake ballet was not likely to leave the Bolshoi trembling with fear.

Flattering attempts made by court ladies fail to charm Dauphin Tylor Strand.

popular success

Though he admires her courage, Warwick advises an unconvinced Joan to denounce her beliefs and thus save her life.

Corpulents, Mountain Dews feud in "Sawmill,"

During a break in Corral Show rehearsals, the student directors momentarily turn their attention to such matters as dates and homework.

"What Do You See in a Sawmill?" this year's Corral Show, brought the 1890's back to town in a colorful melodrama. The script and lyrics were written by student writers, while student directors worked under the adult supervision of Mr. Thompson. Committee chairmen handled ticket polls, publicity, program, and many technical responsibilities, aided by active committee members.

Months of work were correlated into a show filled with hilarious action, villainous buffoonery, kicking chorus lines, and lilting music. The villain, Coreless, and his smirking sidekick, Smedley, slinked slyly through the course of action, causing trouble wherever they went. Francie, the sniveling waitress, followed the beatings of her heart from behind a counter to behind bars.

The take-off on Romeo and Juliet was intertwined with family problems, a chase scene, saloon brawls, and a wedding finale. The Thursday night, Friday night, and two Saturday performances provided families of the community as well as students and faculty members with an opportunity to enjoy the major Corral production.

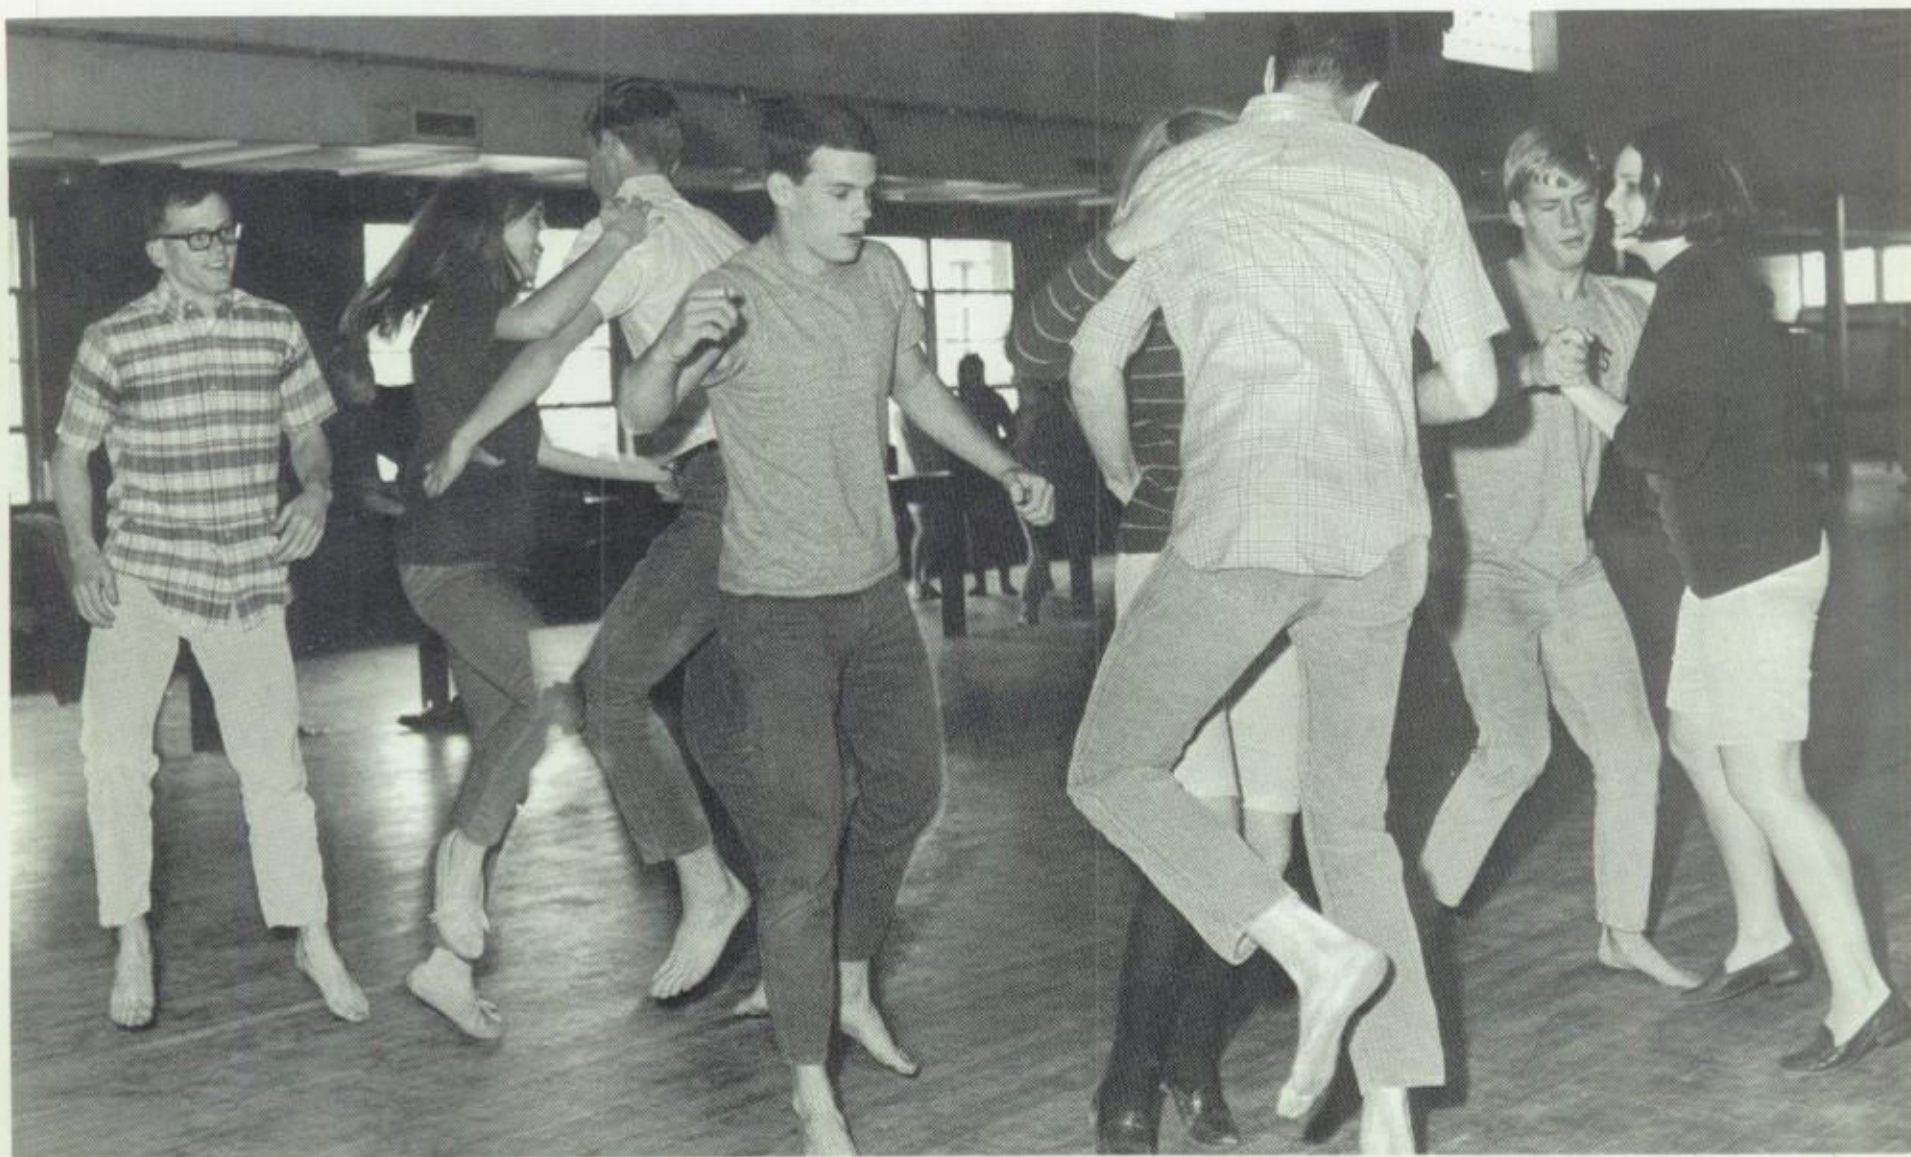

Chorus line members "bend over backward" to follow Mr. Thompson's directions at a Sunday rehearsal.

Four sell-out performances are the aim of student Corral Show ticket captains.

Informative, entertaining assemblies afford

Assemblies taking place this year at both campuses were carefully planned by a committee of ten faculty members. Mrs. Bair handled operations at South Campus, while Mr. Ellis supervised the group which planned the North Campus Assemblies, which were intended to be both entertaining and informative. The assembly schedule was planned a year in advance and was determined by the amount of time available and the variety of student talent. Although each assembly was supervised by some member of the committee, students usually directed, organized, and took part in the program. Several musical presentations by the choirs, orchestra, and the bands, as well as an opening and an election assembly, a program presented by the Chrysler Corporation, and a concert given by the Hinsdale orchestra were included in this year's schedule. The Speech Department sponsored the final assembly which featured a Memorial Day theme.

A combination of music and humor by the "Spurlows" make a driving safety assembly more palatable to juniors and seniors.

ACADEMICS

Scholarship is not the only element emphasized at LT, but it is fundamental reason for attending school. Students and teachers strive for mutual understanding and grasp of their subjects, acquiring knowledge through individual and co-operative study. Perhaps will power is the attribute we can best use when any of our high-minded resolutions are in danger of being punctured by other diversions. In order to achieve a great deal of knowledge and yet be selective, we must put in as much effort as is necessary to gain results. Although we are at times reminded of our grades, we don't work as much for them as for the insights and learning they represent. The final result of our efforts is a strong academic reputation both for LT and for those who have welded it.

The administration, headed by school superintendent Donald Reber, is basically concerned with meeting the needs of the individual student through a co-ordination of department, extra-curricular, and community activities. Improvements in the area of vocational training courses broadened LT's programs and provided for the student going on to work or a vocational school with a background in keeping with LT's high level of preparation. Much of Dr. Reber's attention this year was devoted to planning future additions and innovations. Talking with department and activities sponsors helped him to decide what changes in the facilities would be necessary, while consultation with architects resulted in Dr. Reber's determination of the most economical and effective means for LT's expansion.

in building, junior college, high school programs

Ronald Deabler
Principal, North Campus

Major problems were in the minority for Ronald Deabler, principal at North Campus, who concentrated on hiring teachers and providing them with encouragement and stimulation. By visiting classes to observe teaching procedures, Mr. Deabler was able to gain insight into the problems of today's teachers and to determine possible solutions. According to Principal Deabler, co-operation among Student Council, the administration, and students brought about a greater sense of participation throughout North Campus.

Overcrowded classrooms were the greatest problem faced by South Campus principal Edward Zimdars. The number of students in English classes was increased, and empty drawing and clothing classrooms were used to temporarily alleviate the problem. Looking ahead to next year, Mr. Zimdars sees increased use of team teaching, as well as a more comprehensive program of pre-vocational courses. The language program will again be closely co-ordinated with those of area grammar schools as part of an effort to simplify the transition between junior high and LT.

Tom Hansen

Helping students plan courses, solve problems, and arrange for college admission were several of the duties undertaken by counselors in the Guidance and Counseling Department. Until his senior year, each student meets with his counselor at least once a year to review his activities and future plans. During specially arranged interviews, students may talk about their immediate problems.

At South Campus, counseling personnel are mainly interested in explaining the various aspects of high school life to their advisees, whose main problems often center around adjustment to the high school routine. Because students find that guidance becomes increasingly important during their last two years, all student problems concerning job placement or college admission are intensively studied by the North Campus guidance personnel. Department-sponsored interest tests, round table discussions, interviews with business and college representatives, as well as the Career Day program, aided students in making decisions about their futures.

Anticipation of the next four years prompts Cathy Cannell to re-examine a U. of Iowa catalog before reporting her acceptance to the counselor.

Specialization follows mastery of basic skills in Advancing the dual objective of teaching basic principles of English grammar and increasing student interest in literature, the English Department offered several new courses this year. At South Campus, a Speech Arts class, which met in the Corral, was created to increase facility in the use of spoken English. Oral Interpretation, added as an elective for upperclassmen, included in its course content in-class readings of popular literature. In addition to experimental team-teaching sections of English IIIR classes, other course offerings included specialized classes in drama, stage arts, literature, and journalism.

The department provided interested students with opportunities to compete in speech and writing contests. A group of students who wished to gain added knowledge of English literature and culture will participate in a summer study trip to England, where they will combine learning with sightseeing.

Faced with assignments on contemporary problems, South Campus students turn to the Reader's Guide and the library's magazine collection.

With the introduction of current research materials and equipment, the Library Department continued its quiet revolution. Utilization of financial aid from several sources helped overcome the deficiency of non-book materials. Using a grant from the government, the department purchased filmstrips, records, transparencies, and musical scores. Teachers desiring currently published materials pertaining to teaching methods or specific courses requested these sources from the department. The acquisition of a new phonograph with earphones proved especially valuable to Human Enterprise students, who used it to supplement material presented in class. A gift from the Class of 1966 supplied the department with a microfilm reader, a New York Times index, and a six-year microfilm collection of the New York Times. This new Equipment provided students with materials formerly available only at the large public libraries.

Mike Steichen's Lederhosen add authenticity to his German reading.

The Language Department functions on the principle that through the study of a foreign language, a student better realizes his heritage and the structure of his own language. German, French, Spanish, and Russian, as modern language courses offered by the department, set rigorous standards for grammar comprehension and speech fluency. Each course also provides a sound background in the culture and history of the country it concerns. Latin students explore the classical literature and institutions developed by Roman civilization. Summer programs in Spain and France provide groups of participating students with knowledge unobtainable in classroom experiences. As a department innovation, a special Spanish class for proficient freshman who had had Spanish formerly in grade school was organized on the same basis as was previously provided for incoming students in French.

To relate the past to the present with insight was the primary goal of the Social Studies Department. Students on all levels found well-planned courses, both national and international in scope. Through American History and Freshman Social Studies the department felt that students not electing other social studies courses received at least the fundamentals of citizenship and political awareness necessary to meet the challenges of life in our complex society. Students desiring to broaden their knowledge of the social sciences benefited from programs which enhanced and deepened their awareness of various viewpoints and perspectives of history. The Human Enterprise course made extensive use of aids such as records, films, and exhibits to provide seniors with a thorough background in world culture. The programs of all department courses were examined by a faculty curriculum co-ordinating committee which tried to eliminate repetition of fundamentals obtained in previous courses by regulating course coverage.

Special Ed aim: Individual's sense of purpose

Carefully easing a board through the power saw, this Home Mechanics student begins to see his project take shape.

The Special Education Department tried to give students a sense of purpose and to prepare them for a meaningful, productive life in the community. Particular emphasis was placed on the individual and his needs. At North Campus, the juniors and seniors divided class time between the main building and the vocational training facilities of the annex. Work experience begins in the freshman year, with students at South Campus performing assigned duties and helping teachers. At North, the junior students worked in the cafeteria, while fourth year students were given on-the-job opportunities for placement in the community. A fifth year includes extensions of work experience opportunities, counseling sessions, and other individual guidance. Physically and mentally handicapped young people of the three participating high school districts receive through the five year plan the best possible education to help them become well-rounded citizens.

LT's Mathematics Department stresses the need for understanding and rigorous thinking on the part of the student. Courses are designed to emphasize the logical rather than the dogmatical development of mathematics. This year, experimental hard-cover texts, employing logic both in proofs and applications of mathematical ideas, replaced the MSG paperback series formerly used in Plane and Solid Geometry, Algebra- Trigonometry, and Intermediate Algebra. Also new to the department was a course in computer mathematics taught by Mr. Hammar to qualifying seniors. Classes were designed for the students seeking extensive mathematical training as well as those requiring only a perfunctory mathematical education. Honors students prepared for advanced placement in calculus or received college credit in JC courses. The intense concern of the faculty, however, centered on all levels of achievement.

New additions to the curriculum include a bound version of a new physical science text, developed experimentally by Mr. Hanson and Mr. Taylor last year, plus an IPS physical science course. Because of these additions, the department has an increasing need for more lab space at both campuses. A program of accelerated science courses, beginning in the freshman year, enables capable seniors to receive advanced placement at the college level. An investigative studies group meets before school at North Campus to work on projects entered in such contests as the Westinghouse Science Talent Search and the state science fair. Through a comprehensive program designed to further interest in scientific investigation, the faculty presented the many challenging aspects of science to their students.

In order to attract a greater variety of students, the Art Department further broadened its curriculum this year. Through intensive study of form and design, interested students increased their appreciation of structure and shape in standard courses offered by the department. For those drawn to the more practical aspects of art, classes in studio technique were also available. Students in these classes studied specific methods of working with jewelry, textiles, printmaking, and ceramics. Before-school art seminar classes at both North and South campuses were designed for people interested in art, but lacking the time or interest required for a regular art course. The increased student enrollment in the varied art programs this year gave encouragement to department members as they planned for their 1967-68 course offerings.

In-school vocational experience highlighted in

The Home Economics Department, expanded its curriculum with the recently adopted occupations programs. While receiving high school credit, students gained on-the-job experience in nearby stores, offices, and hospitals. Boys interested in restaurant work found that the Food Service course provided an accurate picture of post-school vocations. Night sessions at Chicago's Marina Towers for students enrolled in Housing and Home Furnishing featured an international showing of interior design. Other field trips related to traditional home economics courses brought students into contact with clergymen, architects, and service workers. Finally, the Human Relations course, a family living and child development class, prepared students for the future.

The department permanently added the formerly experimental In-School Program, sponsored by the State Vocational Education Department, which gives a student experience and final training in office work prior to his graduation. Girls took part in gymnastics, dance, team games, individual sports, and body mechanics. Those girls possessing exceptional interest and talent in physical education had the chance to take part in leadership classes.

Boys were offered a wide variety of activities on classroom and intramural-inter-scholastic levels. Daily calisthenics were followed by programs such as fencing, wrestling, tennis, track, weightlifting, gymnastics, and speedball. # UNDERCLASSES Constantly striving for individual recognition, underclassmen reveal characteristics which identify them as individual classes, while they assume the responsibilities of students approaching their final year. Through contact with seniors, juniors discover and become part of the complex organizational structure of LT activities and government. The self-confidence of the South Campus leaders grows as sophomores gain recognition in sports and extra-curricular activities. Freshmen lose their initial awkwardness and readily adopt established styles and traditions while developing customs of their own. Each underclassman shares the sensitivity, maturity, and understanding which can be gained only through class and personal growth.

"This is the year that is!" sums up the first two high school semesters for LT's Freshman Class. Using this phrase as the theme for their first class assembly in December, the class recognized officers, aides, athletes, and representatives in a presentation which featured a "newscast" skit. The class board, led by president Steve Stout and sponsors Miss Novy and Mr. Jakubka, started the freshmen's year off well by organizing their prizewinning float, "How the West Was Won." The prize money for runner-up float in the gold division was their first contribution to the class treasury.

Entering the Girls' Gym the evening of their class party, frosh walked the streets of old Tijuana. The gym echoed the chords of several combos and the voices of milling classmates. By the end of their first year at L.T., sophistication replaced the confusion that had marked their inauspicious beginnings as freshmen.

Fortified with a year of experience at South Campus, members of the Sophomore Class returned in the fall confident and ready to assume further responsibilities. As an initial display of their dependability, knowledgeable sophomores served as guides during freshman registration and orientation. Next, Homecoming provided the group with an opportunity for co-operative effort, as diligent workers, led by president Mark Davenport, constructed the class float, "To kill a Mockingbird." Class board members chose yellow and orange as their class colors and accepted the design of the '69 button from several submitted entries.

Later in the year, class members who had participated actively in school-sponsored activities or achieved academic prominence were honored at the class assembly, and talented '69ers entertained in original skits. Sophomore class sponsors Mrs. Huegli and Mr. Hammerlund aided in the planning of the successful class party. After a busy year of classes and extra-curricular activities, sophomores held a Tab-signing party before moving to North Campus.

The members of the Junior Class soon found that the jump from South Campus to North Campus was almost as great as their initial move to high school. The world of upperclassmen, they discovered, is a world of college consultants and Career Day, of class rings and drivers' licenses. The junior class board, headed by president Dan Cummings and under the sponsorship of Mr. Reid and Mrs. Seiwert, organized the construction of the class float, "A Tale of Two Teams," as their first project. The spirit that the class exhibited in working on the float and in cheering at the pep assembly was to last through the rest of the year. At the junior class assembly, the audience saw skits designed to foster class and school spirit and to further acquaint the juniors with the foreign students. The last and biggest event of the year for the class of '68 was the class Party. The large turn-out of juniors, sporting the brown and blue buttons they had designed and purchased as sophomores confirmed the unity of the class.

SENIORS

From their orientation day at South Campus until graduation at the close of our final year at LT, the Class of 1967 has achieved a distinctive record.

During the first year we spent at South Campus, we melted into school routine while still maintaining a sharp identity as a class. For the first time that year we organized a class party, "Freshman Fall Fling" and an assembly and also built a homecoming float, "Worldwide Winner" which lived up to its name. The next year, as the class assumed leadership at South Campus, individuals learned to cope with increased class work and a heavier course and activities load. We adopted cranberry and white as our class colors and gave enthusiastic support to various charities and individuals.

Entering the new milieu of North Campus as juniors, we became yet more conscious of the impending proximity of more intensified college preparation. Green conference slips and an introduction to more rigorous testing procedures were symbols of increasing maturity. At homecoming, cranberry and white arm bands gave the class an air of distinctiveness. As we continued the support of a foster child begun the year before, we also assumed more of the responsibilities of club and school leadership.

In our final year at LT, our jerseys and festivities were the obvious signs of an inward unity which had developed over the years. Senior Week, including the traditional breakfast, faculty-student basketball games, and sock-hop, was pepped up by "The Pause Which Refreshes," a senior study hall coke hour in the community room. Finally, the post-prom trip was a capsule of the friendships and activities of the years we spent together.

Club, classwork

Leadership and scholastic excellence were rewarded as seniors were chosen for state and national honors. Recognition of participation in school and community activities as well as scholarship determined the 157 members of the class of 1967 elected to the National Honor Society during their junior or senior year.

On the basis of their scores on the ACT tests, 123 seniors rated as candidates for Illinois State Scholarships. All those who achieved finalist standing were recipients of either monetary or honorary awards.

Selection of the scholars in May culminated over a year of anticipation for National Merit participants. The highly competitive selective process was based on a special test and performance on the SAT. Thirty-two LT students achieved semi-finalist and then finalists status. Notification of the highly coveted scholarships rewarded seniors for their high academic achievement.

Proud to be recognized by her school, Sandy Smith signs the roll of Nat'l Honor Society.
